(Canadian Press) Glendale, Ore., June 29—Apparently mistaking the first section of northbound passenger train No. 16 on the Southern Pacific Railway, for the southbound train, said to be carrying a shipment of $400,000 in gold dust from Seattle to San Francisco, two robbers held up the northbound train last night near Westport, an isolated station in Cow Creek, Canyon.

The robbers rifled the mail car, blowing up the safe, and made away with the registered mail. They tried to secure entrance to the express car, but were followed by Messenger Robb, who refused to open the door despite the threat they would dynamite it if he resisted. The robbers boarded the train while it was taking water, and later crawled over into the engine, forcing the driver to stop at Yorkville point.

Twenty stories up was as high as the construction elevator in the building. There a hose attached to a stand pipe was carried by hand, and the blaze was speedily extinguished with little damage.

MORE THAN 7,000 CARE FREE SCHOLARS START ON SUMMER VACATION

Interesting Exercises in Many of the Public Schools Today Marking Close of Term

Presentations in La Tour and Douglas Avenue Buildings—High School Exhibition Room Crowded—The Programmes by the Scholars in the Many Institutions of Learning in City

For the next two months the scholars and teachers in the public schools of the city will be at liberty to enjoy a vacation. More than 7,000 scholars the enrollment last month was 7,288. Today begins their care-free summer vacation and books are laid away for two merry months.

The schools closed today after a good year's work at which the attendance was up to the standard of the past year. Creditable work was done by the pupils in the various grades. With the exception of one or two of the schools today public exercises were held, but in the High School and other buildings where special programmes had been prepared the parents, relatives and friends of the scholars were present in gratifying numbers.

It has become noticeable of late years that there has been a decline in the number of schools having closing day observed with specially prepared programmes, and it has become equally noticeable that the last day of school is now more of a day of general review rather than one of display by the scholars before their parents or the general public.

An inference of opinion prevails among the teachers and those connected with school affairs on this question. Some are inclined to the belief that the preparation of a special programme on closing day materially affects the examinations, studies and general work of the scholars, in that the usual fine style of that capable hand practice or rehearsing for the different numbers, and that this would naturally be a disadvantage to the pupils.

The closing exercises of the High School were conducted before one of the largest audiences that have ever crowded into the sports arena. The programme was an excellent one, and the students who took part therein were equally noticeable in their manner and work deserving applause. Miss Mabel Williams, in a Shakespearean song, was heard with much applause which greeted their efforts.

W. J. S. MacLeod, president, and under his direction the programme is already published in the Times, was well carried out. The valedictory given by the scholars, and showed careful preparation, and was well written. The declaration from Cicero given by W. Jones was also cleverly delivered and was warmly received.

The selection of the High School was made by the largest audience that have ever crowded into the sports arena. The programme was an excellent one, and the students who took part therein were equally noticeable in their manner and work deserving applause.

KIPLING'S PEN TO AID OPPONENTS OF THE DECLARATION

Writes Poem Against Government Course in Handling The Declaration of London—Two of the Verses

(Canadian Press) London, June 29—Rudyard Kipling has brought a poem into the political arena in behalf of the opponents of the declaration of London, which the government is pushing through the commons. Basing the reported intention of the government not to allow its followers to vote independently, but to insist upon coalition in support of the declaration, Kipling apostrophizes the government as "panting to shame the nation," even before the coronation guests have departed. Recalling the service in the abbey, the poem runs:—

The light is still in my eyes Of faith and gentleness, Of service and sacrifice, And it does not match our mood.

Return as soon to your sophistries, That starve our land of her food. Another stanza runs:— Wait till the money goes, Wait till the victors fade, We may betray in time, God knows.

But we would not have it said, When you make report to our scornful foes, That we kissed as we betrayed.

FIRST COINS FROM CANADIAN GOLD

Sovereigns in Circulation—Other Denominations to Follow When Dies Arrive

Ottawa, June 29—The first issue of gleaming Canadian golden sovereigns has been placed in circulation. The coins were minted at the royal mint in Ottawa out of the gold from Northern Ontario. There were 1,000 of them in all.

For two years golden sovereigns have been turned out at the mint, but these were the first to be made from the gold of Canada's own gold fields.

Preparations are being made at the government mint for the turning out of a number of Canadian coins of Canadian gold, other than the sovereign. The finance department last year authorized the issue of dollar, five dollar, and other gold pieces.

An order for the necessary dies was sent to a leading firm in the British Isles and since then the dies for Canadian gold pieces have been in course of preparation.

"When the dies arrive, we will be able to commence making the coins without delay," said Dr. Bonar, assistant superintendent of the mint.

There is now enough native gold bullion from the Porcupine mine to make a start on the new gold piece issue.

ROYAL PARTY ANOTHER PROCESSION

King, Queen, Prince and Princess at Service in St. Paul's

(Canadian Press) London, June 29—King George and Queen Mary accompanied by the Prince of Wales and Princess Mary, made still another progress through the capital today. Although the procession lacked the ceremonial and military display of those of last week, popular interest was undiminished and from Buckingham Palace to the city and back through Northeast London great crowds lined the route and enthusiastically cheered their Majesties.

The object of today's progress was to attend the coronation banquet given in St. Paul's and afterwards to lunch with the royal mayor and the corporation at Guild Hall. The procession, consisting of four carriages with the members of the royal family and the chief officers of state and the ladies, was accompanied by the usual picturesque escort. The route was lined by 15,000 troops, each regiment accompanied by its band.

The service in the cathedral was short, but impressive, and was attended by a congregation representing every interest and every branch of the service of the empire; ambassadors and distinguished visitors.

As on all royal visits to the city, the royal mayor and the sheriff met the king at Temple Bar and escorted him to St. Paul's, thence to Guild Hall, and after luncheon, to the city boundaries. Upwards of 500 guests sat down to the banquet, which was served in the lavatory for which the corporation is famous.

The weather proved bright and fair and numerous crowds hailed the royal party as they made their way through the streets. The crowds were larger than those of last Wednesday when King George and Queen Mary made a royal progress through South London.

Forecasts of pleasant weather and the absence of rigid restrictions that kept the bulk of the masses from witnessing the royal procession on previous occasions were responsible for the gathering of a larger crowd.

A great throng congregated about the Mall near Buckingham Palace, where the strictest precautions were taken by the police. Promptly at 11.30 the gates of the castle quadrangle were swung open and a detachment of horse guards trotted through following them came the landward division by the famous cream colored horses of the royal stables. King George was dressed in the uniform of a British admiral, Queen Mary wore a Queen Victoria's jubilee uniform.

One of the quietest society functions of the coronation season was given last night by Sir Philip Burne-Jones, the painter, at Sir Richard and Lady Muriel Paget at the Burne-Jones residence, which was converted for the occasion and resembled an unusual society party. All the chairs were removed and there were no floral decorations. Formal receptions were dispensed with, and the guests huddled on the floor on rugs, on the stair cases or in the back garden, the men smoking "church wardens," and the women cigarettes, if they wished.

If they wanted refreshments they had to help themselves from a table of food which stood in the corner of the room wreathed with greens. It was a free and easy affair, all quaffing beer and joining in the chorus of the "Drinking Song." But the supper, somewhat inconspicuously, was one of the cultured delicacy it was served on the floor or stairs or wherever there was room to put a plate.

A very distinguished company, who left all their tiaras and coronets at home, included the Duchess of Marlborough, the Duchess of Somerset, The Duchess of Rutland, Lady Betty Balfour, Miss Violet Asquith, Mrs. John Jacob Astor, the Duke of Somerset, Lord and Lady Drogheda, Lady Elcho, Sir Edward Poynter, Mrs. Jack Leslie, Miss Maxine Elliott and Mme. Genet.
