Lost His Place.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

'I'm very sorry, Mrs. Allison, but we can't take him back.' The superintendent spoke kindly but firmly. 'If it were his first offence, we might let it pass; but he has given us this trouble too often, and we shall now put a quieter man in his place.'

'But it was the drink, Mr. Grant—only the drink!' urged the poor woman. 'There isn't a more peaceable or kind-hearted man in all the shop than Jimmy, when he lets drink alone. And you will give him credit for being a good workman!' 'No better workman in the establishment, but the drink we can't stand any longer. That spoils everything.' 'You'll give him another trial? Say yes, Mr. Grant!' pleaded the unhappy wife. But Mr. Grant said: 'No, Mrs. Allison; I'm very sorry, but this thing is settled. Your husband must get work somewhere else. We can't have him here any longer.'

'Oh, Mr. Grant,' cried the wretched woman, her voice ringing to a passionate appeal, 'just think of his poor old mother! It will break her heart.'

'He should have thought of his poor old mother, Mrs. Allison,' returned Mr. Grant with coldness in his manner that he did not feel. 'We cannot take these things into account.'

It was in vain. Mrs. Allison could not move the superintendent, and she left his office weeping bitterly.

'It is a hard case' said Grant, speaking to his book-keeper in a troubled voice. 'But we can't have Jimmy Allison in the shop any longer. He will take his glass, and when he gets too much he grows quarrelsome. There's no better workman, and no better man to be found, if he'd leave off tippling. But for drink he'd be our foreman to-day, instead of a cast-off. His example is bad, and we must remove it. He leads others astray.'

'He'll go to ruin, I'm afraid,' said the book-keeper.

'Perhaps not. When I pay him off, I shall talk to him, kindly and seriously. And I shall go more.'

'What?'

'Give him six month's probation.'

'Where and how?'

'I'm thinking it out. Can't see it clear, but it will come to me. Where there's a will there's a way. His poor old mother. That touches me. Ah, the poor old mother! If young men would think of them as they should, there would be fewer heartaches in old age.'

Mr. Grant had a harder trial still. In her sorrow and despair old Mrs. Allison came to the office to plead for her son. He was very kind to her, and tried to make her see that her son's loss of his place might really be the best thing that ever happened to him. But this was impossible. She saw nothing but evil in his going away.

Poor old lady! At seventy, instead of comfort in her latest born, best beloved and only surviving child—her boy, she yet called him fondly, though he was eight and twenty—she had heartaching and wretchedness.

'Oh Jimmy! My poor boy, Jimmy!' wailed the mother, on coming back from the office, where she had so vainly striven to change the superintendent's purpose; and, putting her arms about the stalwart man she sobbed and moaned so piteously that he also was moved to tears.

But there was no help for them. The shops were closed to Jimmy Allison and a week afterward he left home to seek for work in a town fifty miles away, where he had an acquaintance in a rolling mill. Upon the sorrow and grief that fell like a shadow on the hearts of his wife and mother at the moment of parting streamed in a ray of hope.

'I've taken my last glass, mother! My last glass, Jenny! And it will come out all right. I'll be sure to get work in S., and then I'll send for you and we'll be happy again.'

Mr. Grant was standing at the window of his office looking out. 'There goes Jimmy Allison to the station,' he said, turning to the book-keeper. 'Poor fellow! I hope the lesson will be good for him. But I'm afraid.'

While Mr. Grant was speaking, he saw Allison stop and stand irresolute for some moments, and then turn and walk quickly toward the office.

'We are to have a parting word—a curse or a blessing,' added Mr. Grant in a changed voice. And the office door opened and Jimmy Allison came in. He did not speak at first, but drew a paper from his pocket, which he opened and handed to the superintendent.

'Oh! a pledge!' said Mr. Grant in a tone of surprise.

'Yes, sir; and what is more, I'm going to keep it,' replied Allison, in a firm and subdued voice.

'Stick to that, my man, and all will be well,' said the superintendent. 'And let me say this to you in parting: if you had left beer and whiskey alone, you might have had a foreman's place here long ago. Nothing has kept you back but drink. For your wife's and good old mother's sake, let it alone.'

'I'll do it, sir. You may count on that. Good-bye, Mr. Grant,' and the man held out his hand, his face working with the struggle of feelings he could not repress.

'Good-bye, Jimmy,' returned the superintendent as he took the man's hand 'Think of me as a friend. It goes hard with me as well as with you. But you left us no alternative. Good-bye! And if all goes right let me hear from you.' Jimmy Allison had no voice to reply. Turning away in silence, he left the office.

'I don't see how you can have the heart to do it,' said the book-keeper after the man had gone. 'He's taken the pledge, and it's my opinion he'll keep it. Why not give him a chance? I can't get the poor, old, sorrowful face of his mother out of my thoughts for a moment; it haunts me like a ghost.'

Mr. Grant did not reply, and the book-keeper turned to his desk and resumed his work. A little while afterward, the whistle of the coming train was heard; a few minutes later, and Jimmy Allison was borne away from home, wife and mother, on the swift wings of steam, a sadder and a wiser man.

The day had worn on drearily to the miserable wife and mother, of Allison, the pleasant June sunshine unfelt until the sun had reached the tops of the western mountains, for the shadow of great trouble rested on the little household. Suddenly the wild scream of the locomotive cut the air, and went echoing among the hills; and soon after the down coming train dropped a few passengers at the station, and then went thundering on its impetuous course.

'Mrs. Allison,' said a boy who rushed into the room where the two women sat in their helpless, half despair, 'here is a letter from Mr. Grant, and he says read it right away.'

The startled wife opened with hands that shook nervously the folded paper and read: 'We've telegraphed Jimmy to come back—look out for him by the down train.'

A wild cry broke from the lips of Jenny Allison: 'Oh, mother, mother! they've sent for him to come back, and there he is now!'

Springing up and bounding through the door half crazed with joy, she ran through the little garden, and flung herself, laughing and crying, all at once, into the arms of her husband.

'We've had a narrow escape, Jimmy, my son,' said old Mrs. Allison, after they were all quieted down. 'It hurts me down here, my son'—and she laid her hand over her breast—'hurt me more, may be, than you will ever know.'

'Oh, don't say that, mother. But you shall never be hurt again,' answered Jimmy, catching his breath with something like a sob. 'Never, never, never! I've taken the pledge, you know, and when Jimmy Allison puts his name to anything, it's got to stand. The Allisons don't go back on their word of honor.'

'I'll trust you, my boy,' was the mother's confident reply as the sunshine of gladness fell over her aged face.

All this happened just one year ago. And has Jimmy Allison kept true to his pledge? More than true; for besides holding true to his own integrity, he has induced a dozen other workmen to follow his example, and is now organizing a temperance society in the shop, where he already holds the position of foreman.

Oil for Rough Seas.

The following from the Edinburgh Scotsman will not fail to attract the attention of mariners generally:—

"Mr. John Sansom, oil refiner, Port Dundas, has patented an apparatus for throwing oil on rough or broken water at sea for the purpose of rendering it perfectly smooth. Of late the subject of pouring oil on troubled water has received a great deal of attention, and a number of experiments have been made with more or less success. The apparatus constructed by Mr. Sansom is an exceedingly simple invention, consisting mainly of a tank for containing the oil, with a contrivance by which the oil is spread over the water. The principal feature of the invention, however, is the composition of the oil which is also a patent. It is claimed for the apparatus that by its use the end in view is certainly and speedily secured. A number of testimonials have been secured in its favor. One of the machines has been tested on board a small craft belonging to the Earl of Glasgow, and his Lordship has written to say that although the sea was comparatively smooth at the time of the experiment, sufficient was accomplished to indicate the value of the apparatus in rougher weather. The machine is made of various sizes to suit steamers, ships or yachts. Yesterday one of the smaller ones was exhibited at the premises of Mr. Sewill, Broomielaw, and in the course of the day it was inspected by a large number of gentlemen interested in shipping."

How To Cure a Cold.

Take some gentle opening medicine, bathe the feet in warm water, adding a spoonful of mustard; remain indoors; equalize the circulation with warm bath and friction; drink warm ginger tea, and take Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, the most perfect and the safest cough cure that can be procured.

Hon. W. T. Pipes, at present Premier of the Nova Scotia local government, has been nominated as the Liberal candidate in Cumberland, Mr. Oxley, of Oxford, and Mr. Smith, of Parraboro, have been nominated for the two seats to be vacated in the local Legislature.

Every Spring.

HOW AN AFFLICTING ANNUAL VISITOR WAS DRIVEN FROM A WEARY WOMAN.

Plain and simple mechanics are not liable to get out of order. Complicated watches, intended not only to keep the time of day, but to mark themovements of the moon and stars, are certain to need frequent repairs. Husbands and fathers often fail to see that their wives and daughters are more delicately organized than themselves, requiring corresponding care when they are well and assistance when they are ill. Yet much better for woman's fine system is a trustworthy medicine, ready at all times for use, than a deal of tinkering by semi-educated local practitioners.

"Every spring," said the wife a well known employee of the Grand Trunk Railway, Montreal, "I have been for some years past troubled with nervous debility and weakness. It was the burden which so many women are called upon to bear, although none the lighter for that.

"Advice and dosing, to be sure, I had in plenty; still, on each returning spring my sickness came as regularly as the buds and blossoms.

"You seem better now.'

"Oh yes; I consider myself almost or quite well, and it came about in thisway. A lady living on St. Catherine street this city, commended to my attention Sulphur and Iron Bitters. It gave me strength and life. My sister, living in Brockville, whose disease was nearly the same as mine, was equally benefitted by the same thing."

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. READ PROOF BELOW.

Saved Him 1,800 Dollars!

ADAMS, N. Y., Jan. 30, 1882.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents: Having used a good deal of your Kendall's Spavin Cure with great success, I thought I would let you know what it has done for me. Two years ago I had as speedy a colt as was ever raised in Jefferson County. When I was breaking him, he kicked over the cross bar and got fast and tore one of his hind legs all to pieces. I employed the best farriers, but they all said he was spoiled. He had a very large through-pin, and I used two bottles of your Kendall's Spavin Cure, and it took the bunch entirely of, and he sold afterwards for $1800 (dollars.) I have used it for bone spavins and wind galls, and it has always cured completely and left the leg smooth.

It is a splendid medicine for rheumatism. I have recommended it to a good many, and they all say it does the work. I was in Witherington & Kneeland's drug store, in Adams, the other day and saw a very fine picture you sent them. I tried to buy it, but could not; they said if I would write to you that you would send me one. I wish you would, and I will do you all the good I can.

Very respectfully, E. S. LYMAN.

From the Akron Commercial, Ohio, of Nov. 25th, 1882.

Readers of the Commercial can not well forge that a large space has for years been taken up by Kendall's advertisements—especially of a certain Spavin Cure. We have had dealings with Dr. Kendall for many years, and we knew of some large business houses in cities near by who have also dealt with him for many years, and the truth is fully and faithfully proven, not only that he is a good honest man, and that his celebrated Spavin Cure is not only all that it is recommended to be, but that the English Language is not capable of recommending it too highly.

Kendall's Spavin Cure will cure spavins. There are hundreds of cases in which that has been proven to our certain knowledge, but, after all, if any person confines the usefulness of this celebrated medicine to curing spavins alone, they make a big mistake. It is the best medicine known as an outward application for rheumatism in the human family. It is good for pains and aches, swellings, lameness, and is just as safely applied to men, women and children as it is to horses. We know that there are other good liniments, but we do believe this spavin cure to be far better than any ever invented.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

Hutchinson's Ranch, 13 miles north of Denver, Col. Mar. 5th, 1883.

DR. B. J. KENDALL, & Co., Gents:—For the past three years I have used Kendall's Spavin Cure. In every case of spavin, of which I have treated five, it has killed them all, and entirely removed three. In case of splint I find it has no equal, one case I had was of three years standing and the Spavin Cure removed it entirely. I had a cow get spavined and it entirely cured her. One year ago a two hundred pound block of ice fell out of a wagon striking my foot on instep and toes, it would be impossible to mash a foot worse without breaking any bones. I was taken home and carried into the house. I do not think amputation of the leg would cause any more pain. I sent for Kendall's Spavin Cure, it was all I used, and in six days I could walk around. About three weeks ago my team ran away and threw me out of the wagon, the hind wheel struck my knee. After applying several highly recommended liniments without obtaining any relief, I went for Kendall's Spavin Cure. My leg was drawn up and my knee swollen badly. In three days I was able to walk to the barn. I could go into details more fully and make this a very long letter, but will not weary you.

I am very respectfully yours,
OSCAR F. HUTCHINSON.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

Santa Rosa, Cal., Feb. 9th, 1883.

B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—I feel it a duty to others suffering with the piles and falling of the rectum to write you. I have had the piles and prolapsus of the rectum for five years, for the past three years I have suffered the most agonizing pain. Tried everything without relief, but after ten days use of Kendall's Spavin Cure I have not seen nor heard of the piles since. One who has not suffered as I have cannot comprehend the great joy that I feel at being cured of a disease almost worse than death. I had a valuable young horse that had a large buncli gather on his breast bone. I tried all kinds of liniments and had it cut open without any benefit. Saw your advertisement and bought a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and ordered my teamster to use as directed. In less than one week the lump had disappeared. Thinking that a liniment that would do what Kendall's Spavin Cure has done for my horse might benefit more. I tried it as a last resort.

With gratitude and best wishes for your success, I am faithfully yours, J. H. GLENN.

The Kendall's Spavin Cure is in excellent demand with us, and not only for animals, but for human ailments also. Mr. Jos. Voris, one of the leading farmers in our county, sprained an ankle badly, and knowing the value of the remedy for horses, tried it on himself, and it did far better than he had expected. Cured the sprain in very short order.

Yours respectfully, C. O. THIBAUD.
