Experiences During His Service

The Star today, on behalf of the Board of Associated Charities, makes an appeal for help in a most deserving case. Only on one previous instance has the board found it necessary to adopt this plan for securing relief, but in the present case the appeal is absolutely unavoidable, and help for a suffering family must be secured immediately.

A woman, well educated, of good family, and in every way worthy, has through circumstances entirely beyond her own control, come to a most philable condition. Being without to the United States. Her husband, who is not a deserving person, followed her. A short time ago the woman was compelled to return home. The husband is still absent and his whereabouts is at present unknown.

This woman has four bright little children, the oldest being between seven and eight years, and an aged and infirm mother, depending on her.

On their return to St. John the unhappy family sought the home of a former friend in North End. This man is poor, and is out of employment, yet he took in the six destitute ones and has done his best to provide for him to do so. They must seek other quarters this afternoon. Mrs. Hall, secretary of the Associated Charities, makes an appeal for help in a most deserving case.

To the Editor St. John said:
Sir,—You had an article in the Star of the 15th inst., under the heading. The Amazon of the Indian Mutips. It brought scenes and recollections to my mind of long ago. It told about Jhanel and Jhansi's Queen, and a good description it gave. I thought, perhaps, the writer little knew there was a man in St. John well acquainted with the town and Fort of Jhansi's Rami. I had the honor to be with Sir Hugh Rose from the first to the last of that bloody campaign. It is true that the town of Jhansi had wail all around it from is to 30 feet high strongly fortified with bastions and guns, and over this wall, for the North Mannel and Guns, and over this wall, for the North Mannel of the Wall. While a complete the North Mannel of the North Sir,—You had an article in the Star of the 15th inst., under the heading, The Amazon of the Indian Mutiny. It

SERGT. URQUHART'S FUNERAL WITH MILITARY HONORS

With full military honors, the funeral of Sergt. Tilley Percy Urquhart, of the 62nd Regt., took place this morning at eleven o'clock from his late home on ing but death could subdue or conquer her.

I was also present at the capture of the noted Tanti Topi. He was another great warrior and a crafty man, one who could not be taken in an open fight. He was betrayed by one of his lleutenants. We took him in a small village in the jungle and brought him to the garrison of Mhow, and there we hung him. Sir Hugh Rose was one of England's greatest generals; he was never defeated. He won honor and glory for his country and great credit and praise to himself. He was called Victorious General Rose, and his country honored him for his bravery by clevating him to the peerage and making him a field marshal.
