I need not say how glad I would be to do anything that would likely further your wishes; but without first drawing your attention to these circumstances, I think you will agree it is wise for me not to do more than I have here indicated.

I am more than delighted to know that Willie has come safely through the War, and I hope indeed that he may succeed in securing the appointment he desires. I am sure he would make an excellent Editor for the post. He has the best of all credentials, which are his own writings and experience. I hope they will receive the recognition they deserve.

With kindest remembrances to yourself and to Bella,
Believe me, always,
Yours very sincerely,
