

else could—for there is not a shadow of bitterness in it. "Do not be afraid for me, Gabrielle. It has been a long struggle. I have not been through one fire only, but through a spiritual fire also, that, I trust, has burned out much dross. Now I can say with you that I am 'beginning to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth and length, and depth, and height, and to know by experience what is the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge.' "