TRADE TOPICS.

A WONDERFUL PICTURE.—In connection with a new and clever advertising idea, there has just been completed at Dayton, Ohio, what is declared the greatest group picture ever made. There are thousands of photographs, each the likeness of some energetic man or woman who belongs to the great family of "Thomas Agents." Many of them have never seen Dayton, Ohio, but all take pride in the share they had in building up the business of the Thomas Manufacturing Company of that city. This is not only the largest agency house in the States, but it is also remarkable for its phenomenal growth. It had its inception only six years ago, in a hall bedroom in the home of M. H. Mathews, its founder and present efficient head. On February 23rd last, the company celebrated its anniversary, and the thousands of loyal agents sent their photographs to join this great group in celebration of the event. It took seven weeks to engrave the pictures, the whole reaching the enormous size of 72 by 146 feet. The plan was worked out by the Mumm-Romer Company, advertising experts of Columbus, Ohio. Anyone interested in a copy of above picture of this great army of energetic, prosperous workers, should write immediately to the Thomas Manufacturing Company of Dayton, Ohio, who will gladly send full information free of charge.

GOSSIP.

Over 100 Clydesdales were shipped from Glasgow the last week in May, including, for Canadian importers, over 50 for McCallum Bros., Brampton, Ont.; 8 for Geo. G. Stewart, Howick, Que., and 4 for Vanstone & Rogers, Wawanese, Man., the balance being consigned to Australia and New Zealand.

SPOILED ONE BOY.

Whenever I see the subject of keeping the boy on the farm touched upon, an incident which happened when I was a boy comes into my mind. About six miles from our farm was one of a large number of farms owned by the wealthiest man in the country. He lived in town, but put in most of his time driving from one farm to another. He was a vigorous personality, a close dealer, and made money on his farming operations. One evening my father and I were driving past the farm mentioned. The old gentleman was sitting in his buggy near the road. We stopped, and my father entered into conversation with the other gentleman, in the course of which it developed that he had that day sent his younger son, a lad of about eighteen, on his first independent steer-buying trip. He said he wanted to see what Irve was good for. While we were still talking, Irve came in sight, driving a small bunch of steers. As they came up, the old man got out of his buggy and looked them over, and asked Irve what he paid for them. On being told, the instinct of the close trader got the better of the judgment of the father, and, notwithstanding our presence, he unmercifully, telling him he had no sense, was not worth his salt, was an easy mark, etc., etc. I was but a boy at the time, but I could see the effect. It was Irve's first deal, and he was feeling proud that his father had for once given him an opportunity. The old gentleman's tirade humiliated and discouraged him, injured his self-respect, and weakened his confidence. He became a wild, worthless young man, and died in early manhood under circumstances which brought shame upon his family. This one incident was not enough to ruin the boy, but as a part of many others of the same sort, was no doubt responsible for turning a bright, promising boy into a dissolute, worthless young man. A little kindness, a little instruction, a little patience, a little more attention to the most precious of his possessions, would have enabled this man to go down to old age with pride in his sons. He outlived them both, and died with the better knowledge that, notwithstanding his wealth, his life had been a failure in the only thing worth living for.—The Observer, in Wallace's Farmer.
