

THE CARE OF FARM IMPLEMENTS

The annual loss due to ignorance or negligence in the care of farm implements is appalling. Figures have been published from time to time showing depreciation on implements from lack of shelter and care, still many farmers winter their implements in the field where they were last used, or scattered about the arm yard. A manufacturer, if he is to prosper, must keep his production cost at the lowest possible figure. The same applies to the farmer, who is no less a manufacturer, and one of the ways in which he can materially cut down his expenses is in the proper care of his implements and tools.

All implements when not in use should be under cover, and not left exposed to the influence of the weather. A machine or implement shed need not be an elaborate affair. If it can be wholly closed, so much the better. It should be conveniently situated, and the front should consist largely of roller doors, so that any implement can readily be obtained. As to the arranging of the various implements, a binder being used practically at one season of the year, may be stored in a far corner, leaving space nearer the door for mowers, ploughs and other implements used at various times throughout the season.

A stitch in time saves nine, and many an expensive repair item might be saved by repairing a machine at the first appearance of trouble. When implements are taken out they should be looked over carefully, nuts tightened, adjustments and triva repairs made, which if left might develop no end of trouble. Far too little machine oil is used, causing excessive wearing on bearings and castings, and working untold injury on the machine. A coat of paint not only adds to the appearance, but greatly prolongs the life of both wood and iron. Polished surfaces, such as plough shares and mould boards, should be smeared with grease or painted with kerosene and lamp black when not in use.

A good farmer must be a good mechanic, more especially if he operates tractors and other large machinery, otherwise his repair items will be high, and the usefulness of the tractor or machine greatly impaired. If possible avail yourself of some course at a tractor school, and become familiar with the intricacies of your motor. In this way, you will obtain better service, and the repair items and mechanics' bills will be reduced to a minimum.

A work shop, with a small forge and anvil, and some good tools for both wood and iron, is a great convenience, and indeed a necessity on many farms. Having this, many repairs and adjustments can be made, plough shares pointed and sharpened, and a host of other things done that would necessitate a trip to the local blacksmith or machine shop.

No one takes more pride than the owner of a well-ordered and cared-for farm where there is a place for everything and everything is in its place.

WE WONDER

City Boy—"What's that, pa?"
 Father—"That's a cow, sonny."
 "And what's that on his head?"
 "Those are horns."
 They turned around and the cow moaned.
 Boy—"Which horn did he blow then, dad?"

DOMESTIC REPARTEE.

He—"You told me before we were married you would try to economize."
 She—"Yes, and when I did you assured me that you would work so hard that economy on my part would not be necessary."

FAIR PLAY TO THE NEWSPAPERS

(From the Sackville Tribune)
 Quite a number of people seem to think that the newspapers run for the sole purpose of publishing notices of public entertainments of one kind and another. They forget sometimes in their ardor for boosting some sort of affair that the newspaper has to live and pay its bills; that it cannot give away its space and still remain solvent. The Tribune is always willing to do its part in aiding a worthy cause but some people seem to have the idea that the newspaper can give away its space and when the collector comes around the newspaper men are supposed to "come across" with real money, just the same as if the newspaper and those behind it had previously given nothing.

One pet scheme seems to be for the workers to prepare home-made posters and then expect the newspaper to boost the affair, giving the notice prominent position, for a trifling sum.

Now we do not want to offend anybody but The Tribune has certain rights which must be respected. Our publishing business has been built up through many years of hard work and while we do not wish to be nasty we do want others to respect the rights which rightfully belong to us.

Sometimes people ask us to insert notices about some entertainment and then fail ever to send us tickets of admission to the show. Subsequently they want a good report inserted concerning the success of the entertainment. Just how they expect us to get the report is more or less of a mystery to us.

We are prepared to give good service to the public. We are striving to get all the news of our local field. We don't want an exorbitant profit; we are content with very modest remuneration but the members of our staff have to live and pay their just debts. If a thing is worth advertising then it should pay a reasonable amount for publicity. Space in The Tribune is our farm. If we give away all the produce of the farm to philanthropic enterprises how are we going to pay our taxes and the bills incident to a cold winter?

It is worthy of note also that public entertainments are to some extent conducted in competition with Mr. A. A. Ayer of The Imperial Theatre, who is easily The Tribune's biggest advertiser and one who pays his bills without protest. When we give free publicity to a rival entertainment then we are not fair to The Imperial Theatre and to those behind it.

All this is intended to convey the idea that in future The Tribune will scan free notices with greater care than ever before, and our policy henceforth will be that all entertainments must pay at regular rates no matter whether they be philanthropic, religious or otherwise.

TONSILS

Most every disease that begins to show, by the howl of pain or the tale of woe—be it nutmeg liver, orpest-house itch, or weepin' janders—I don't keer which—we can jugulate 'em, beyond a doubt, by simply clippin' the tonsils out!

You mebbly have heard of Melindy Crane, who was borned with softenin' of her brain. So, when she developed the craze fer verse, we jedged a 'relapse would fetch the hearse. . . but she whooped with joy, an' hollered fer kraut—the minnit they jerked her tonsils out!

And of course—you knowed old Sandy Beggs, which had paralysis in his legs,—an' when the old feller commenced to bloat, we seen right off, it was all his throat! And jest afore she run into gout, they cured him, by whackin' his tonsils out!

The feller that's skeered of a death of days, can dodge it—by joining the tonsil craze. . . He can set down, an' let 'em rim out his neck, an' get up again—like new, by heck!

"Would Wake Up Screaming"

"The Least Sudden Noise or Loud Talking Would Startle Him."

"Up to the age of eight, my boy was a strong, healthy lad, full of life and energy. While playing leap frog one day with some boys of his own age, and, while in a stooped position, a big boy jumped on his back and in falling my boy caught his foot in an iron grating and dislocated his hip. The pain was so great that he fainted and the other boys were so frightened they ran away. For hours he suffered terrible pain and when found and brought home was very weak, with his thigh and leg swollen twice its size. The doctor set the bone but the pain and exposure were too much for the poor boy and he became unconscious. A high fever set in and for weeks he lay between life and death raving for hours at a stretch. One day he opened his eyes and murmured 'Mother,' but this is the only word he could utter he was so weak, but I knew the worst was over. He got stronger but for months was in a nervous condition. The least sudden noise or loud talking would startle him and he would begin trembling. He was quite lame and the swelling still remained. The doctor gave him a tonic and told me to rub the leg with olive oil. This reduced the swelling and took away the lameness, but the nervousness remained. The poor child would awaken in the night screaming at the top of his voice. The doctor gave him several different tonics but they were no use. I found a circular about Carnol and it seemed so different from other tonics I had heard of, that I thought I would get a bottle. Three bottles were all that was needed to make my boy like his own self again. It is hard to convince my friends that the change in him now is entirely due to Carnol. Of course I still have to watch him and give him Carnol occasionally but I know that he will soon be as strong again as ever he was."

Mrs. P., Montreal.

Carnol is sold by your druggist, and if you can conscientiously say, after you have tried it, that it hasn't done you any good, return the empty bottle to him and he will refund your money.
