Miscellaneous.

The world-wide reputation of Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the natural result of its surpassing value as a blood medicine. Nothing, in the whole pharmacopœia, effects more astonishing results, in scrofula, rheumatism, general debility, and all forms of blood disease, than this remedy.

Minnie—The idea, Mamie, I never thought you would marry a man with a red moustache. Mamie—His moustache isn't red, you hateful thing. And if it were, there's just as much tickle to a red moustache as a black one.

"I have used Ayer's Pills for the past 30 years, and am satisfied I should not be alive to-day if it had not been for them. They cured me of dyspepsia when all other remedies failed."—T. P. Bonner, Chester, Pa. Ayer's Pills are sold by all druggists.

Didn't Care for the Accessories.—"Well, Bobbie," said his father the day after Christmas, "aren't you sorry Christmas comes only once a year?" "Oh, I don't know. If Dr. Squills has got to come the day after Christmas every time, I'm rather glad of it."

A faded or gray beard may be colored a beautiful and natural brown or black, at will, by using Buckingham's Dye for the whiskers.

A deeper depth of woe.—First little dear—"Isn't it awful, Mandie; papa won't let us have any mistletoe in the house at Christmas, and my brothers bring home such a nice lot of young men." Second ditto—"Ah! it's worse at our house, dear. We've got heaps of mistletoe, but no nice young men."

MESSRS. C. C. RICHARDS & Co.

Dear Sirs—I took a severe cold in February last which settled in my back and kidneys, causing excruciating pain. After using several other preparations and being without sleep four nights through intense suffering. I tried your MINARD'S LINIMENT. After the first application I was so much relieved that I fell into a deep sleep and complete recovery shortly followed.

Olfactory.—He (with a look of dissatisfaction at his dish—"He is so particular!")—"My dear—I think——" She—"Oh, I'm sure it's a very good ham, George; a genuine Westphalia." He—"Ah—well—yes, dear—I sm—certainly perceived it was a failure o' some sort directly the cover was taken off!"

When Baby was sick, we gave he Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When he had Children, she gave them Castoria,

Younger sister—"Mother, I think it is too bad I am sixteen; yet you make me wear such short dresses that it mortifies me terribly." Mother—"My dear, you cannot wear longer dresses till your elder sister is married." Younger sister—"Well, she is as good as engaged to Mr. Doolittle, and I think I'm entitled to an extra flounce."

Mothers

Castoria is recommended by physicians for children teething. It is a purely vegetable preparation, its ingredients are published around each bottle. It is pleasant to the taste and absolutely harmless. It relieves constipation, regulates the bowels, quiets pain, cures diarrhœa and wind colic, allays feverishness, destroys worms, and prevents convulsions, soothes the child and gives it refreshing and natural sleep. Castoria is the children's panacea—the mothers' friend. 35 doses, 35 cents.

Dress reform. Charlie—Blanche, dear, I wish you wouldn't wear that terribly low-cut dress again that you wore at the ball last night. Blanche—Why, Charlie? You always said before we were married that I looked lovely in it. Charlie—Yes, dear; but it's different now. It causes remarks. Young Thornton said to me last night, "I see your wife's back from Brookline."

Consumption Surely Cured.

TO THE EDITOR:—Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their Express and P. O. address.

Respectfully, DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 37 Yonge street, Toronto, Ont. a 11-1y.

Farm and Household.

THE "BOTS."

Of all the ailments that horse flesh is supposed to be subject to, says a correspondent in the Western Agriculturist, there is none more commonly suspected and treated for by horsemen and farmers than "bots." Most persons understand them to be grubs which inhabit the stomach of the horse, and there set up disturbances which give rise to the most varied and unaccountable chain of symptoms.

The bot is the half formed young or larva of a fly, the maggot it might well be called. The adult insect is a true fly, having but two fully formed wings. It is about one-half inch in length, rusty grey and somewhat wooley, with the wings spotted or mottled. It has no mouth and therefore can do no damage in this stage, neither can it live long. The female fly has the body prolonged into a tube for depositing the eggs. These "nits" are glued on the hair of the horse during the latter part of the summer, and are placed in places that the horse is accustomed to lick, such as behind the knees, under the flank, and in front of the shoulder. When the young maggot is ready to hatch out, the moisture and warmth of the horse's tongue opens the lid of the egg, and the worm is carried in the mouth and swallowed.

There are two hooks, one on either side of the insect's mouth, and with these it attaches itself to the lining of the stomach. The head is blunt and cylindrical, and has two short nodular feelers on the edge. In the center of the terminal disk are the gullet and mouth, which consist of a tough, horny tube ending in two triangular lips. On either side of the gullet is a hook which points outward, and two can be spread like the barbs of an "anchor" hay fork. There are no jaws or boring apparatus by which they could eat through a membrane. They attach themselves by preference to the left sac of the stomach where the lining is thick and of a texture like skin. Here after a while the head becomes more or less imbedded in the lining—more by thickening of membrane around it, however, than the thinning at the point of contact. As their skins are too tough to allow the absorption of food through them, as is the case with the tape worms, I am forced to believe that the insect derives most of its nourishment from the walls of the stomach and not from its contents. This would be similar to its cousin, the ox-grub or "warble" which lives in the skin of the ox.

But though I have examined carefully, I have never seen a case where there was a perforation through the mucous or lining membrane of the stomach—to say nothing of the two or three thick layers of muscle tissue outside of this. In cases where the stomach has been ruptured by gasses, I have found the rupture through the thinner portion or right sac of the stomach, while the bots were attached to the left sac.

During the months of May and June these grubs get their full growth and, letting loose are washed out of the stomach and bowels. They enter the ground, where they go through their changes, and come out in two or three months as perfect flies, with wings and legs. These lay the eggs as already explained, and then die as they have no way of getting nourishment. There is, then, a period from June to August in which no bots remain in the stomachs of our horses. This is a time of the year, too, in which there are as many cases of "bots," so-called or colic, as any time of the year. Evidently then there is no disease left for the horseman to fall back on during this season, but "stoppage of the water," or some kindred trouble. There is probably not a single country horse, and, few if any, city horses that do not carry bots in their stomachs during the winter and spring months.

Lastly, is there any medicine that will dislodge them? In the spring, when they let go of themselves, a brisk physicing will bring away large numbers of them. In specimens before me there were several grubs that retained life and motion after being in 50 per cent. alcohol for four days. I leave the reader to experiment and find a drug that will kill this parasite and leave us the horse.

A CURE FOR DIPHTHERIA.

HOT, BUT SAID TO BE EFFECTIVE.

SUCCESSFUL TREATMENT IN NORTH CAROLINA DESCRIBED BY A BROOKLYN NITE—

RED PEPPER TEA.

A correspondent of the Brooklyn Eagle says:—As diphtheria is prevalent on Long Island and all sorts of cures, including the mopping and caustic process, are offered by well meaning persons, it may not be out of place for me to state what an old lady did to prevent me from dying after the doctors gave me up and I could not swallow water for the space of three days. In the winter of 1859-60 diphtheria became epidemic in Warrentown, N. C., when I was paying a visit. Of course it was my luck to fall an early victim to that dread disease. I was stopping at Dr. Brownlow's hotel and as soon as taken sick sent for Dr. Howard, who afterward gained a celebrity in Baltimore. He attended to me in the usual way, until at last he advised me to saying it was unecessary for him to call again. It was the custom of Mrs Brownlaw to come to my room every day after the doctor took his departure and ask what he said. This particular morning when Mrs. Brownlow was told what Dr. Howard had said she seemed surprised and remarked:—

"You are as good as two dead men yet and if you will do what an old woman advises I have no doubt but that you will pull through."

Drowning men are apt to catch at straws, and in my serious extremity I was willing to swallow a red hot stove if necessary; so I accepted the lady's offer with thanks. She left my room and in about half an hour returned holding a quart pitcher in her hands. Mrs. Brownlow approached my bed saying: "Take a swallow."

I did as requested, and heavens, what a feeling I experienced. It seemed to me as if there were 400 knives in my throat and every one of them was DOING ITS SHARE OF CUTTING.

My case was not only a bad, but a very dangerous one, and while the draught was doing its work I turned black in the face from choking. At last the matter came up. I drew a long breath and felt relieved.

"You feel better?" said Mrs. Brownlow.

I confessed that I did, and was ugly enough to say that Dr. Howard could not attend to a yellow dog of mine. In course of time I recovered, and when able to get out called on the doctor to pay my bill. If my spectre had stalked into that office or if anything else horrible had happened, Dr. Howard could not have been more surprised than he was at seeing me alive, though very weak. He asked what saved me and I answered Mrs. Brownlow, who, in my opinion was a better physician than he. Mrs. Brownlow's remdy was simple and one that is in nearly every house. Make a quart of red pepper tea, and after straining add a tablespoonful of common salt. Then sweeten with honey to suit the palate and gargle as often as possible, always keeping the tea before the fire so as to have it lukewarm. The pepper and salt are the knives that do the cutting and the honey heals the wounds. In extreme cases one dose of oil will help much at first.

FARM NOTES.

The forty million hogs raised in the United States, are valued at $200,000,000.

Good beef should have a bright red color, not too dark, dry and tender to the touch, fat and with a smooth, open grain.

Hens do not eat their eggs unless they learn the habit from having eggs broken in the nest. Never use stale eggs as nest eggs.

A large portion of the exports of apples from America to England last year did not realize enough to pay the advances made by commission merchants.

Many a farm has its fertility wasted in large part by raising weeds, valueless for any purpose except to make manure and, for that, produced at too great cost.

A dust bath is the toilet of the hen. It is her mode of keeping her body clean. If given a dusting place she will keep the vermin off if you will keep the poultry house clean.

An English strawberry grower uses oil meal and wood ashes spread about the plants and worked into the soil, and recommends it as clean fertilizer for strawberries. No weeds in that manure.

There is no way of cleaning dirty milk. Remedies are here out of place. Only preventives will answer the purpose. The only way to have clean milk is by keeping the dirt out of it, and this goes a great way in securing good flavor.

Laying hens rejoice in a variety of food. They will eat almost anything that is left over from the table, and it cannot even in the country, be put to a better use. It is far more profitable to feed this to hens than to one or more worthless dogs, as so many poor farmers often do.

The custom of beginning to mess cows a week before calving tends to an increased amount of blood in the system, which at that time is not desirable, as it flavors inflammatory attacks. It is safe to diminish this tendency for a few days before and after parturition by rather lighter feeding.

In transplanting trees all the roots which may have become bruised or broken in the process of lifting should be cut clean away behind the broken part as they then more readily strike out new roots from the cut parts. In all such the cut should be a clean, sloping-one, and made in an upward and outward direction.

Continued crossing of birds among farmers result in dissatisfaction nine times in ten. A farmer buys a pen of thoroughbred fowls, breeds them one year, thinks they do not lay enough eggs; says it is time to cross with a good laying strain of birds, does so and at the end of another year is dissatisfied and wants another cross. All the time his birds are becoming weak in constitution.

Soon the early lambs will be coming. The first hour of life is the most important, as it is then that the cold may destroy the little creatures. Have a warm place and be on the watch for weak lambs. After they are able to be on their legs and can secure milk from their dams they will take care of themselves if not exposed. It is not economical to keep many ewes together during the lambing season. Give them plenty of room.

The Spanish proverb that the foot of the sheep is golden is especially true in winter. No farm stock so easily kept will make so large a pile of valuable manure as will sheep. They will tread down and evenly mix with their droppings a large pile of straw in the winter. The value of the manure pile will depend on the feed given the sheep; but if they are fattening they pay well for graining, as it increases wool growth as well as fat and flesh.

WEED THE STOCK.

Weed out the stock with a rigid hand. There are altogether too many inferior animals found among the herds and flocks of the common farmer. These pull down the average income seriously, and in far too many cases wipe out the profits entirely. This applies to stock of every kind found among the farmers. Note the difference between the returns from the best, and compare it with the other extreme. This is all the argument needed.

It sometimes seems like a waste to dispose of the inferior animals at the small price they will sell for, but better far to destroy them outright and without return, than to keep them when they do not pay their way and are only a tax on the owner. With every animal on the farm a good one of its kind, and if cared for and fed in conformity with the best practices of the day, there is no trouble about the profits. Young farmer, if you are in debt and desire to make the farm pay, see to it that no inferior animal is fed at your expense. Weed them out.—Maine Farmer.

TAFFY.

If the children are to have a "taffy pull," here is a recipe for old-fashioned molasses candy:—

One pint of the best New Orleans molasses and one pint of yellow sugar. Boil briskly for a few moments, then stir in one and a half or two ounces of the best butter cut into bits. Continue boiling until the bubbles grow large, then take up a few drops of the syrup in a spoon and put it on a cold plate or, better still, a saucerful of snow. If the syrup hardens in a moment or two, you may know it has been boiled long enough. Stir in a pinch of soda (dissolved) as you remove it from the fire, and when it foams up, quickly pour it out to cool. This becomes very light when pulled and is a favorite variety. Flavoring with vanilla is an improvement. It requires about two teaspoonfuls of the strong extract for this quantity of candy.—Exchange.

Ask For Ayer's

Sarsaparilla, and be sure you get it, when you want the best blood-purifier.

With its forty years of unexampled success in the cure of Blood Diseases, you can make no mistake in preferring Ayer's to any other. The fore-runner of modern blood medicines, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is still the most popular, being in greater demand than all others combined.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla is selling faster than ever before. I never hesitate to recommend it."—George W. Whitman, Druggist, Albany, Ind.

"I am safe in saying that my sales of Ayer's Sarsaparilla far excel those of any other, and it gives thorough satisfaction."—L. H. Bush, Des Moines, Iowa.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla and Ayer's Pills are the best selling medicines in my store. I can recommend them conscientiously."—C. Bickhaus, Pharmacist, Roseland, Ill.

"We have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla here for over thirty years and always recommend it when asked to name the best blood-purifier."—W. T. McLean, Druggist, Augusta, Ohio.

"I have sold your medicines for the last seventeen years, and always keep them in stock, as they are staples. 'There is nothing so good for the youthful blood' as Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—R. L. Parker, Fox Lake, Wis.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla gives the best satisfaction of any medicine I have in stock. I recommend it, or, as the Doctors say, 'I prescribe it over the counter.' It never fails to meet the cases for which I recommend it, even where the doctors' prescriptions have been of no avail."—C. F. Calhoun, Monmouth, Kansas.
