Lord Curzon and Charles I.

Lord Curzon investigates in the line teenth Century the question as to which window at the Banqueting Hall in Whitehall was the one from which Charles I. stepped to his exe-

"The dispute is one which I do not presume to solve, though I am not deterred by Lord Beaconsfield's alleged wittleism from stating its conditions," says Lord Curzon. "He is ported to have given the following advice to a young man about to enter society 'Never ask who wrote the Letters of Junius or on which side of Whitehall Charles I. was be- are the best assistants your eyes can beaded. Neither of the questions here posed is any longer acute, for the indentity of Junius scarcely admits of doubt, and the puzzle at Whitehall is not on which side the river Charles I. was executed - for it is absolutely certain | Can make them to suit all condition hat the scaffold was erected in Whitehall directly facing what was then the Tilt Yard and is now the Horse Guards—but out of what part of the building he stepped on to the scaffold, after resting for a while in the interior of the palace. "Sir Thomas Herbert, his gentle man of the bedchamber, who at tended him in his walk across the Park and to the scaffold, and who carried off his dead body to be embalmed, says that there was a passage broken through the wall by which the King passed unto the scaf-fold.' Excluding inadmissible suggestions, the alternatives are practially limited to two, either the mid d'e window on the lower tier of the Banqueting House was broken through—these windows were at all times unglazed and were built up of masonary - so that the king might step straight out on to the scaffold or, after walking through the Banqueting Hall he passed into a little annex or building which then proected from the northern or Charing Cross end corresponding to the present outer entrance into the Royal United Service Museum and stepped through a window on the Whitehall face of this building —where is now end of the scaffold, which extends along the face of the Banqueting House towards Westminster. In this case the pa-sage broken through the

How The Kaiser Reads the World's News

"The Kaiser as he is" is the title Baron vom dewitz who thus de scribes the Emperors habitually energetic plunge into the day's work

"With true Prussian punctiliousness he gets up at six o'clock sharp every morning, rain or shine. The only exception to this iron rule is when he rises at four o'clock, or even earlier, to attend a military review or similar function, and when he being set for seven o'clock.

"Before his Minsters call to present a survey of the days policitial outlook the Kaiser has put in more than an hour's reading of the principal German and foreign newspapers. Of course he cannot read all the papers but in order not to miss anything of vital interest he maintains a small staff of trained readers who operate in seven languages under the s arching eye of a Prussian officer with specific instructions to clip the essential news appertaining to questions and issues in which the monarch is specially interested. The cuttings are pasted on large cards and inserted in a loose-leaf portfolio of morocco leather bearing the imperi-

"At precisely seven o'clock the officer presents the portfolio from which the Kaiser proceeds to draw information making blue-pencil remarks in the margins as he goes along criticising or approving the the selections made. If a vital foreign article is encountered in a language not known to the Emperor—who by the way speaks English and Per SS. "Stephano," French like a native-it is translated on the spot and pasted in the port

"By thus systematising and s lec-ting his newspaper and magazine which comprises technical and scientific problems as well as political military, naval and art topics, the Kaiser has reached a point where he is easily the best informed and best

Hr. Grace Notes.

Mark, infant son of Selby and Bertha Noseworthy, died on Monday last, aged 2 months, and on Saturday last, Hedley, aged 8 months, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Ash, of Noad Street.

Death has been particularly busy the past week, and on Thursday, night the dread summons came to Mrs. Pynn, wife of Mr. Geo. W. Pynn. Mrs. Pynn had been a sufferer for a long time of consumption, but fought the battle bravely. She leaves besides an aged father and husband, three little children to mourn the loss of an af-When you allow your eyes to be children to mourn the loss of an a furnished with cheap glasses you have a poor workman in your employ.

Mr. Leander Parsons, for a number of years past, acting turnkey at the jail here, who we reported some time ago as suffering from a serious stomach trouble, passed away this morning, aged 65 years. Mr. Parsons leaves a widow and several sons and daughters to mourn their loss. He was a quiet, thoughtful man, and his death will be regretted by a large number of friends and acquaintances.

A thoughtful little girl of the West End, who held a ticket for the event of the season, the Masonic Festival, to be held this evening, found herself not sufficiently recovered from an attack of illness, to attend, so she proved she was not selfish, by sending the ticket to a friend with the request that she go in her stead. Such thoughtfulness and kindness is a worthy pattern for many of the older folks.

A disgraceful scene occurred near Bannerman Street, yesterday (Sunday), when two hitherto friends, with apparently little or no provocation, commenced to pummel each other unmercifully. So long and severe was the battle, that at its finish one at least had to be carried home with blood flowing from his head, and one of his eyes permanently injured. No need to shudder, gentle reader, the one a Plymouth Rock, the other a Brown Leghorn.

The King Edward Brigade held its first Church parade yesterday and attended the morning service at the Methodist Church. The Band of the Brigade took its place at the head of the parade for the first time, and discoursed sacred music on the parade. Twenty-one instruments in all are in the Band. Mr. Collis, the teacher, has accomplished excellent work during the past six weeks, and he and his lads, as well as Colonel Rogers, and the other officers of the Brigade, are to be congratulated on the excellent turn out. The service in the Church by Rev. Mr. Darby, was very hearty and thoroughly enjoyed by all present. We hope soon to see the sister Brigade, C.C.C., commencing its regular Sunday Church parades.

Mrs. John L. Oke returned from St John's on Tuesday last, after a fev lays pleasantly spent with friends.

The 'Daily News' tells us that couple of cases of smallpox were late y reported at Haystack, and surmises that it was brought from Barren Island. From a letter lately received from that place, we hear that two cases of a mild type are under quarn the Estate of Joseph Augustus antine at Haystack and one at Spen-Pike, of Saint John's, Storekeeper, cer's Cove, and it is thought the disease was taken while at a boarding house at Placentia. This should be ons claiming to be creditors of or investigated as we have not hear of any cases at the latter place.
