THE THOUGHTS OF THEOBALD.

THE COT FUND.

This fund has become one of the most popular funds and deservedly so. Two hundred beds and even more are not large figures when you think of the number of beds in the Empire when we begin to realize how many cots our own men need. Just now, the blessed peace of a hospital, in a bed with clean white sheets, after trench work, is a boon that we should be glad for them to have, and be glad to pay for.

Alas that some of our boys will never need beds again. So far we have only known the glory and pride of eager departing companies; now we begin to realize that not all will return. This brings home the seriousness of war. The "Rosary" of this incomplete life's hours always seems to lead to a Cross. Some heads sag for sorrow, some for joy, but all lead to our last enemy, Death. It requires strength to kiss the head of sorrow, but how hard it must be suddenly to have to kiss the Cross.

O memories that bless and burn! O barren gain and bitter loss! I kiss each head, and strive at last to learn.

To kiss the Cross!

The great consolation always is that the Dark is followed by the Day; Good Friday is followed by Easter Sunday, and the Cross by the Resurrection.

LIFE IS GIVEN, BUT MONEY IS LOANED.

To one who sits down and thinks, the thought must come that if life belongs to the Empire, it must surely be true that all material possessions belong to her as well. Almost the whole of her wealth has been created within her boundaries. It has been created by the sweat of her people's brows. All have had a share in this. Whether, in the process of business, this wealth has accumulated in a few hands or been circulated among many, does not matter. The time is past when money is a criterion either of character or mental ability. That being so, it is manifest that the wealth of the Empire, created by all the peoples of the Empire, belongs to the Empire as a whole. So that as this war is the Empire's, as a whole, it follows that all the resources of the Empire must be engaged in order to make the victory complete, and soon. The vital resources are our men. It is almost inconceivable for them, for the call certainly must strike every young man. And not because of any love for war, but because he thinks there is a duty involved, and sometimes because he sees everyone around him going, he joins the Colours. In no sense does he loan himself to the Empire; for her to do with him as she will, even to the death. Now how is it that our material resources are only loaned to the Empire, while our lives are given?

If you add all the sums that have been given for Patriotic Funds, you will find that it all could be supplied by one or two of our rich men if they had offered their material possessions as our volunteers have offered their lives. I know that it would not do to take away capital from our businesses, but I refer to the excess money which is made every year and which in many cases is not re-invested in the Colony.

The Shell Company offers a splendid opportunity in this way. The Government surely had no faith in the patriotism of our rich men when it felt compelled to guarantee a dividend on money invested in it. At any rate we have now the example of the Canadian Cartridge Co. which returned $750,000.00 of its profits to the Government. This action is not so much remarkable as an act of generosity as it is an eye-opener to the enormous profits being made. Surely such profits are as much anti-British as a cheer for the Kaiser would be. My point is this: Inasmuch as all have contributed of their physical and mental strength to create the wealth of the Empire, so ought the surplus money, the money held which is so far in excess of ordinary requirements, be returned to the Empire, to help our common cause. Even if it is not given to the Empire, let it be loaned without interest.

LOYAL OLD TRINITY.

I am told that in Trinity and in Dunfield (near Trinity) there is not a man, single and eligible for service, who has not enlisted, either in the Regiment or the Naval Reserve. It is a remarkable record and one, I think, that cannot be approached by any other towns in the Island. Private W. Tibbs, a Gallipoli veteran, is proud of his native town, and with such a record behind him, ought to make a good recruiting sergeant on his trip north.

MORE TARIFF.

In spite of the apparent failure of the first experiment in tariff road-making and in spite of the fact that other cities have reported unfavourably on its qualities, our Council is proceeding with the work, and extending the tariff road. This, in the face of so many streets unprotected from the dust on the plea of economy of water carts, and streets needing small repairs; in the face of so many houses needing sewerage connection, and so many workmen's houses needing it, is disappointing, to say the least, that the new Council should have inaugurated its term by an admission that money should be spent on paving a street rather than in securing more healthful conditions in the back streets. This portion of Duckworth Street is not at all thickly populated either. If the money that the Council uses to pay its proportion of the cost of the tariff is taken from the general road funds of the city, then I consider that it is far from being fair to the rest of the city. If all office is about 5 ft. by 9 ft. and perhaps 10 ft. high. It is occupied generally by the Clerk in Charge and three or four messenger boys who fill the office pretty well. The Post Office is now a public resort, so that the atmosphere cannot be very pure. In this atmosphere, drawn through the open shutter of this small office, clerks have to live all day. It is the principal telegraph office in the Postal service, and is far too small for the work. It is almost impossible to stretch one's legs in it. It is also unfair to the public to have no place that can be considered private to write telegrams. I might enlarge on other disadvantages of this "corner" office, but I trust I have written enough to draw the attention of the authorities to a state of affairs that is fair neither to the employees nor to the public.

POSTAL-TELEGRAPHS.

I beg to call the attention of the Public Health Officer to the office of the Postal Telegraphs which is on the first floor of the Post Office. This office is about 5 ft. by 9 ft. and perhaps 10 ft. high. It is occupied generally by the Clerk in Charge and three or four messenger boys who fill the office pretty well. The Post Office is now a public resort, so that the atmosphere cannot be very pure. In this atmosphere, drawn through the open shutter of this small office, clerks have to live all day. It is the principal telegraph office in the Postal service, and is far too small for the work. It is almost impossible to stretch one's legs in it. I might enlarge on other disadvantages of this "corner" office, but I trust I have written enough to draw the attention of the authorities to a state of affairs that is fair neither to the employees nor to the public.

"Right to it This Time,"

"Officers fell right and left, but as they fell they waved their men on 'right to it this time'; was the cry. A second lieutenant speedily found himself in charge of a company, and as he fell a sergeant sprang forward to take his place. Companies melted away, but as each man fell he always cried, 'Now right on boys, right to it this time!' That was their slogan, and bounding from shell-hole to shell-hole these gallant lads struggled towards the German wire, a few reached the German wire, which 'marvellous to relate, was almost intact. But they could do no more. The charges were over—they had failed, but in brave company, for at the outset they all realized that what had been impossible for eight English regiments was not possible for them.

Your Boys and Girls.

Scientists say sugar is a very good food for children if it is properly eaten. The trouble with a great deal of candy is not with the sugar it contains, but with other harmful ingredients. Another trouble is that too much candy is eaten at a time, and that it is eaten at the wrong time—between meals.

The best candy for children consists of a little pure chocolate or sweet chocolate tablets—or pure sugar, as in a lump of sugar or pure rock candy or barley sugar. Only a little of this should be eaten at a time and preferably it should be eaten after meals so that it will not spoil the natural appetite for other things.

Children should always be taught not to twist or wring the nose when using the handkerchief. This habit is often the cause of a mis-shapen nose. Rough handling is also apt to enlarge the nose and make it red. The redness can in some cases be reduced by bathing the nose twice daily with witch hazel.

Witch hazel is best made the bits for her by cutting dress shreds in two and covering each half with soft material. These protect her dresses and are as easy to launder as any other bits.

Newfoundlanders Charge Hopesless Task

SURVIVORS' ACCOUNTS—WOUNDED SHOT ON RESCUER'S BACK.
 (Daily Mail, July 14.)

"Newfoundlanders I salute you individually. You have done better than the best."
 Thus the General to the men of the Newfoundland Regiment after its great attack on July 1. The Newfoundlanders were given what is now recognized to have been an impossible task, and although they failed the story of their bravery and daring will live for ever.

The regiment had been in reserve waiting to take its appointed place in the great attack—the capture of the third line of German trenches immediately in front of them. The task of capturing the first and second lines was assigned to English line regiments.

That night few returned to the British lines, but the Newfoundland spirit is indomitable; already the regiment is reshaping itself.

For every man who fell in that glorious fight there are two others willing and anxious to take his place, and all burn with the desire to avenge the comrade, the brother, and the cousin who fell!

There are now, just behind the British lines in this quarter of the field, a few mounds of earth which no Newfoundlanders fail to salute—the burial ground of those who fell on July 1. Reserves volunteered to a man to recover their dead, and under a galling fire from German rifles and guns they performed their task.

"We wanted those at home," said one who did his share, "to know that our comrades sleep easily; that the padre has said the prayer for the dead and that we who live to bring the Germans to account."

V. C. ACTS.

Survivors are full of stories of the courage of their comrades. They tell how Captain J. A. Ledingham, the youngest captain, led his company in the charge; how he fell, wounded in three places; how he crawled into a shell hole and lay there more dead than alive for upwards of five hours. Then he heard the moaning of a comrade, and peeping over the edge of his shelter saw lying a few yards away his old Newfoundland chum, Lieutenant Robertson, almost at his last gasp. Captain Ledingham, hardly able to move, crawled to his comrade and there, under a rain of shot and shell, hoisted the Lieutenant on his back and crawled with him to the British lines.

It is also told how Lieutenant C. S. Frost, a bank clerk from Nova Scotia, three times went out from the comparative safety of the firing trench to bring in wounded comrades. He brought them all in, but two were wounded with bullets as he struggled towards the lines and died on his back.

In the charge was a young private who but an hour, or so before the attack went into the firing line for the first time. He went over the parapet with his comrades and was probably one of those who got nearest to the German lines. All his comrades were shot down, and he fell into a shell hole filled with dead. He had no idea of the direction; he could not tell which way the German and which the British lines. For four days he stayed there, shells exploding all round him and bullets coming asperly from all quarters if he as much as showed his nose.

FOUR DAYS' ORDEAL.

His rations were exhausted and he had to take food and water from the dead round him. At the end of the fourth day, he determined to make for the trenches, but which he did not know. By good fortune he chose the right direction, and was taken in by a British patrol. He was quite unconcerned with regard to his adventure and the only explanation he gave was, "Oh, I was fed up with
