Household Notes.

Steamed cucumbers and Holland-aise sauce are nice served with a course of broiled lobster.

One-half teaspoon vinegar added to the cold water when mixing piecrust will make it flaky.

When mixing pastry use a perforated aluminum cork-fitted top on a bottle to add the liquid evenly.

The water in which vegetables are cooked should be saved as for soup or to use in making white sauce.

In deep frying pan the fat should always be reheated to the desired temperature after each batch of frying.

Serve potato salad in sweet green pepper cases.

A potato crust is suitable for a vegetable pie.

Rub mutton with a cut onion before roasting it.

Corn omelet should be served with cheese sauce.

Melted currant jelly is nice served with breaded veal cutlets.

Cream toast is delicious when made with Boston brown bread.

Lemon and horseradish should be served with oysters on half shell.

Stewed prunes require no sugar. A little lemon juice improves them.

Chopped apples, pecans and raisins make a delicious sandwich filling.

Serve potato salad on rounds of ham and sprinkle with chopped dill pickle.

Hot strong black coffee will relieve the most obstinate case of hiccoughs.

A Royal Engagement.

The announcement of the engagement of Prince Albert, Duke of York, second son of King George and Queen Mary, to Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon will give pleasure to His Majesty's subjects everywhere. When it was announced that the Princess Louise would marry the Marquis of Lorne, an old Scotch lady is reported to have remarked: "The Queen will be a proud woman the day." And if the old lady were still living she would probably remark that there would be another proud mother in England.

The lady who is to marry the Duke of York traces her ancestry back in unbroken descent almost six centuries to a great-granddaughter of Robert Bruce. This latter lady was also a granddaughter of Walter the "Steward," who married Bruce's daughter, Marjorie, and founded the Stewart line, and a daughter of Robert Stewart, the first Stewart King.
During the entire period the Lyons, into which family Robert Second's daughter married, have lived in Glamis Castle. It is a curious coincidence that the last Stewart who reigned in Britain was a Duke of York, and the last of the race was still another Duke of York, Henry Cardinal York, who was the second son of James, the "Old Pretender," and who died in 1807.

Glamis Castle stands a little way off the road from Dundee to Kerrmuir, and in general appearance reminds one of a French chateau of the sixteenth century, but the old portion known as King Malcolm's room is of remote antiquity. Like many other relics of feudal days, it has its secrets and its mysteries, and Sir Walter Scott, in his "Letters on De-monology and Witchcraft," writes that Glamis, or, as he spells it, Glamis, is "favorable to that degree of superstitions awe, which my countrymen expressively call eerie."

Mirrors Used by Ancient Greeks.

In Greece and in Rome wealthy people adorned the walls of their houses with polished, shining plates of copper, gold or silver. The pieces were square, provided with a nicely carved frame and were polished afresh by slaves every day so that their masters and mistresses might look at themselves in the metal mirrors.

Up to the Fifteenth Century Europe did not know the glass mirrors. These were first made in Venice and acquired an enormous fame which they have held to the present time.

It seems as though no other city is able to rival Venice in the manufacture of mirrors.

Gold Bearing Clay Found in Germany.

CORRACH, GERMANY—Gold deposits have been located in the iron ore mountains near here. One ton of clay earth, which was analyzed as an experiment, was found to contain 44 grams of the precious metal.

This assay aroused the interest of German experts, in view of the fact that there are gold mines in operation which net only 10 grams of gold per ton of earth. Bearing deposits have been uncovered in several different parts of the mountains.

Wreck of H.M.S. "Orpheus."

On February 7, 1883, H.M.S. "Orpheus," a new vessel of 1,700 tons, was wrecked, with terrible loss of life, on a sandbank which forms a bar facing the entrance to the harbour of Manukau, on the west coast of the North Island of the three constituting New Zealand. From the inquiry afterwards made, it appeared that either the vessel was not kept far enough to the north or that the middle bank had very recently extended itself unknown to the pilots; for, very shortly after passing the bar, and when about two miles from the Head, or promontory at the northern entrance of the harbour, the ship struck on what was subsequently discovered to be the extreme edge of the middle bar in that direction, at about 50ft. from the deep water. The order was given to back astern, but the engines never moved; and the ship immediately broached, with her head to the north, and the water made one complete sweep over the port, broad-side, or the whole length of the vessel on that side, tearing to pieces and carrying everything before it; and as the heavy bumping of the ship then forced up the fastenings or coverings of the hatchway, through which persons pass from one deck to another, the ship filled with water. A small steamer, the "Wonga-Wonga," picked up a number of survivors from the wreck; but, of 260 officers, sailors, and marines on board, no fewer than 150 were drowned, many of them being carried beneath the wreck by the eddies and undercurrents, which formed about the vessel, when the strong flood tide, or high tide, set in.
About eight hours after the "Orpheus" had struck, the masts went one by one, the brave people in the tops—the platform that projects on all sides from the head of the lowest mast—being heard cheering and encouraging one another as they fell.

The commander, Commodore Burnett, C.B., was among those drowned. Although this wreck occurred so near the coast, and although the loss of life was so large, these lamentable facts were not due to any inhospitality or inhumanity on the part of the natives, for they recovered the commander's body and buried it on their own shore, though it was afterwards disinterred and removed to the neighbouring city of Auckland of which Manukau is the western harbour, and his remains were there reinterred with military honours.

Loneliness of Lepers Relieved by Radio.

SAN JUAN, PORTO RICO. (Associated Press.)—Cabros Island, the home of Porto Rico's leper colony, after years of dreary days and silent nights, can now listen to the voices of the world. A radio receiving set has just been installed there, within a few days a loud-speaker will be attached, and thirty-six new radio fans will be enchanted with the marvels of science —and occasionally, of course, disgusted with the perverseness of static. The radio set was made possible by an anonymous gift of $100 which came from New York, to which were added local contributions. Probably not since its invention has the setting up of a radio set been watched by a more interested group of spectators than that which followed the movements of the Rev. Charles B. Rare and two employees of the Porto Rico Telephone Company as they installed the instrument. Not that there was much animated comment or boisterous enthusiasm. Life on a bare, shadeless reef on which the hot sun's rays beat fiercely, and against which the surf pounds ceaselessly, is not conducive to an exuberant display of feeling.

LEPERS ARE DELIGHTED.

"When the loud speaker comes you will be able to hear concerts, music and singing in San Juan, in Havana and in the big cities of the United States," they were told. There was a chorus of "Magnifico" and "Que bueno," and one man remarked—"It was meant for such exiles as we are."
For, near as they are to San Juan, the lepers regard their isolation as exile. "Somos pobres desterrados," ("We are poor exiles") they tell you.
They complain of the loneliness of their lives more than they do of the disease itself. Even the prospect of hearing nightly the strains of famous orchestras and the words of eloquent speakers does not reconcile them to their lot. They hate the glaring sunlight, for it pains their eyes. They hate the salt and misty night air, for they aggravate their sufferings. They hate the dreary darkness of a night relieved by nothing but little oil lamps. "Help to get us away from here," they urge the visitor.

WILL LISTEN IN.

The radio concerts will be heard in the club house of the Philanthropic Society of Cabras Island. The club house is rather meagerly furnished, a broken victrola, a rather unsteady table, and some benches and chairs.
Superintendent Rubin has promised to see that everyone has a seat—and so on nights when Pittsburgh and Havana "speak out clear and bold" the exiles of Cabras will be listening. But one who used to be of their number will not be there. During the year a new grave has been dug in the burying ground at the extreme point of the island. The living never go there, while the wireless was being installed a cat played among the graves. At the approach of two men it paused alert, then ran, frightened, into the tall grass.

TRUTHFUL.

Employer: "John, I wish you wouldn't whistle at your work." Office Boy: "It wasn't working, Sir; only whistling."

Famine And Disease.

MENACE NEAR EAST REFUGEES.

CONSTANTINOPLE. (Associated Press.)—One hundred thousand refugees are seriously ill or dying on the coasts of Asia Minor, Thrace and the Greek mainland. No nation as yet has come forward to help them. Private relief organizations seem helpless to cope with the entire problem.
It is too vast. Greece is face to face with a social catastrophe. Internal order and security are menaced by the hordes of starving and distracted fugitives pouring into the country.
Famine and disease are stalking through Anatolia, Thrace and the Aegean Islands. Women and children are dying everywhere. Even so great and precious a thing as mother-love cannot survive the agony and despair wrought by the sudden breaking up of families and homes. At Samsoun, on the Black Sea, mothers in their desperation are abandoning their children and feeling for their lives on board any ship that will take them.
The parentless children are left to the merciful hands of American women relief workers. Their fathers have long since been deported or killed.

GREEKS ROBBING AND LOOTING.

In Thrace, Greek soldiers and refugees, maddened by hunger, are robbing and sacking the countryside. In Constantinople, a city of a thousand sorrow, pedestrians at night stumble over the half-dead forms of children huddled in doorways and alleys. Today a caravan of dejected and exhausted refugees from Anatolia swarmed up the Grande Rue de Pera of the capital like famished wolves.
Fifty thousand Turkish refugees, 45,000 Greeks and Armenians, and 14,000 Russians fill the capital's cup to overflowing. Typhus, smallpox, and dysentery are devastating the refugees areas in Thrace, Pinarus, and Salonica. In Anatolia, where the Greek army burned, sacked, and killed, there are 600,000 shelterless Turkish peasants, whose plight is rendered doubly acute by heavy snows and lack of clothing. In the great storm of indignation following the Smyrna fire, they have been forgotten. Many of them are innocent, law-abiding, home-lovers of the soil, who deserve some measure of the world's sympathy.

WILL PERISH WITHOUT AID.

Correspondents who have travelled throughout the affected territories report that unless foreign government relief measures are undertaken, a majority of the two million or more refugees will perish this winter.
There is virtually no fuel, no shelter, no clothing. The relief work of the Athenian and Ankara governments is pitifully inadequate. They are both bankrupt. Help must come from the outside and as yet this help has not proved effective, particularly in Salonica, Thrace, Constantinople and the Aegean Islands.

WANTED—AN UNDERSTUDY.

The little boy addressed his mother wistfully.

"I'm going to have a little sister some day, ain't I?"

"Why, dear, do you want one?"

The child nodded seriously.

"Yes, mummy, I do. I get tired of teasing the cat. Besides, it scratches."

NOT WHAT SHE MEANT.

They had been picnicking, the girl, her little sister and the eligible young man, and as they ferried across the river at sunset, the little sister exhibited some signs of fear.

"Why, Amy," said her big sister, "if you are so nervous now, what will you be at my age?"

"Thirty-nine," promptly replied the little sister.

ACCORDING TO THE MOTHER.

Mother: "Well, dear, did
