ANOTHER RECORD BROKEN. New York, July 6.-Arthur E. Smith, the western cyclist who left Chicago last Sunday night for this city, in an endeavor to break the bicycle record of 142 hours and 15 minutes, between that city and this, arrived here at 3:21 o'clock Saturday afternoon, smashing the record by 4 hours and 54 minutes.

How Stout Wemen Acquire Curves and Thin Women Angles-By the Aid of Light You Can be Transformed Into a Thing of Beauty and a Joy Forever.

"We are sure of at least two sittings from every woman during her lifetime," said a well known photograph-4 er complacently. She is sure to be 3 photographed in her wedding gown, and once, at least, as she has a mother, in short frocks. "It is natural that most women should like to be photographed. You see the attention is all concentrated on them, and then they fancy they see themselves just as others see them. Fancy-yes, because the camera lies, and we assist it to lie. We have to," he added apologetically, "or people wouldn't like us so well." He took down the picture of a well he took down the picture of a well known singer. "Madam weighs about 180 pounds. She is very handsome, very attractive, and she sings like an angel; but the 180 pounds are there just the same. Now, it is a great sat-isfaction to madam to look at this picture and see her slim waist, her finely curved arms, her slender hips, her ta-pering wrists, her delicate throat. Exthe arm, that the width of the hip, this the line of the waist, and therewell, yes, we must acknowledge there "On the negative I carefully mark (it requires an artistic touch, because one must be sure not to destroy the individuality), a certain distance within or beyond, according to the subject. the original lines. A picture must be pretty. One does not want ugly plc-tures about, and then, too, we must make up to you for your loss of animation of color. "Now, there is a point, a very difficult one. Nine women out of ten, I am sorry to say it, come in here with the rouge on the cheek, the paint on the lips, the powder on the nose.

It Is Said That Civilization Has Proved Too Much for Them.

What Benefits They Derive from It Are More Than Counterbalanced by Its Evil Effects Upon Them-Their Customs and Superstitions.

JAUNT of six weeks in the wilds of Cana-da between Lake Nein the wilds of Cana-da between Lake Neda between Lake Ne-pigon and Hudson Bay has brought me to the conclusion that the benefits de-rived by the aborig-ines from contact with civilization are far more than counterbalanced by the evil effects thereof, says a writer in the New York Herald. Necessity has compelled the Indian to adopt in a measure the dress of the European, the gun and knife have taken the place of the bow and the tomahawk, a few have been converted to Christianity and a few more have been taught to disregard the religious belief of their ancestors, but the vast majority still adhere in all respects to the manners and customs created by natural disposition and the exigencies of life in the wilderness. The Indians are still numerous, but that they are decreasing in number is the testi-mony of all. Those who remain prefer to have as little to do with the white man as possible. They acknowledge the superior-ity of the Caucasian. Their martial spirit has been broken and they lead an existence whose only aim seems to be provide food and clothing for the present. The number of half breeds compared with the pure Ojibways is insignificant, but even in these half breeds the spirit of the aborig-ines is predominant; they prefer to live the nomadic life of their dusky parent, and comparatively few of them have acquired a knowledge of the English language or in any way imitate the habits and customs of the whites. They have learned the use of twine in the construction of the gill net, but they prefer their own fishhooks made amine the photograph closely. Where those deep shadows are, those black lines, yes; that was the outline of the arm that the width A gun is a necessity to them, but they have not advanced sufficiently to recognize the value of a breech loader; they still use the old smooth bore musket, which carries either shot or ball. They have no horses or cattle and, in fact, no domestic animal excepting the dog, the latter being used in their winter travels.

On the shores of Lake Nepigon, somewhat over a hundred miles north of Lake Superior, I found one small patch of potatoes, not sufficient to keep one family through the winter; the owner said that it was his second and last experiment in raising the tubers. The fact is that every Indian who came along helped himself, as had been his wont, to all he desired of the products of the fields and the woods, and the amateur farmer found little to reward him for his labor.

I was accompanied in my travels by two half breeds who spoke English, and by two Chippewa Indians, who understood nothing of what I said excepting the few words of Ojibway I had picked up. I spent near-ly all my time in travelling, and consequently had an excellent opportunity of obtaining an insight into the mode of the life of the Indian of the present day. They believe that Nannibijou created the heavens and the earth and all things in and upon them; that Nannibijou died and that but he must be near starvation before he al distrust are the punishment for general distrust are the punishment for crime. The government attempts to en-force the laws against crime, but the In-dians object to this inter. Since. Murder is left to be punished by vengeance of the aggrieved relatives; if there are none of these the chances are that the crime goes unnunished unpunished. A curious incident, which is at present causing a great deal of talk among the Chippewas, was narrated is me by several or them, some of whom were witnesses of the occurrence. An Indian of strong build and apparently enjoying his usual health, announced that in ten days he would be dead. He was laughed at, but he persisted in his statement and made all preparations for death. He straightened out his accounts with the Hudson Bay Company, and find-ing that there was no balance in his favor on the books of the company, he asked whether the company would furnish him with a new suit of elothes to be buried in. This was promised apparently to his great This was promised apparently to his great relief.

relief. The fatal day arrived and a number of Indians assembled at the wigwam. The Indian was apparently as healthy as ever and was reclining at ease on his blanket made of rabbit skins. As sunset approach-ed he got up and walked out. He pointed sun set and those who went to rouse the Indian found him dead. There had been no death struggle, no pain or manifestation thereof, life had passed quietly away. The Indians know that their race is dying out; they see it decreasing in numbers every year. They blame the white man for a large portion of their misfortunes, but what they say is uttered in sorrow, not in anger; they are resigned to their fate. They say that now the Indian is subject to colds and to consumption, and they claim, that these are whitemen's diseases and the Indians of a few centuries ago knew them not. Consumption is certainly killing them off. I have seen them lying about my camp fire expectorating blood in considerable quantities, but this did not seem to dis turb their screnity. They are very fond of visiting each other, and whenever I pitched my tent the dusky children of the forest gathered to exchange notes with the Indians in my employ. Just at present they are suffering from a severe visitation of the measles, and as they are utterly helpless the death rate is large. Few of the game and fish laws passed

Few of the game and fish laws passed by the various provinces of the Dominion affect the Indian, nearly every one of these laws contain a provision that it shall not apply to the aborigines. This is due to the fact that fish and game furnish food for the Indian. But the Indian has laws of his own on the subject, some of these laws being based on superstition, others on reason. Fourteen is the limit to the num-ber of bears any one Indian may kill in a season; if he kills more than that number one of the numerous devils constituting one of the numerous devils constituting his mythology will make trouble for him. Bears are hunted by means of steel traps and deadfalls, the latter being baited with fish. Should an Indian approach the nut ber of fourteen he will set only enough traps to make his complement in full. If by any accident he should capture more than fourteen he will liberate all in excess of that number, if the bears in excess of fourteen have been killed in deadfalls he expects some grave misfortune and it takes a great many prayers to avert it. If an Indian is stricken with illness or meets with a serious accident his fellows look at him askance and argue that he must have killed more than fourteen bears in the past season. During the summer months an Indian may kill a bear for food
