-It is suggested that congregations should break loose from ultra-conventionalism, particularly during the summer months. Why not? The Toronto Baptist says; "In reading the accounts sent us from time to time of the success of the outdoor service conducted by the pastor of the St. Thomas church, one is led to ask whether the same method might not be used with good effect in many other places. Circumstances vary in different localities, and what may be desirable in one place, or in the case of one pastor, may not be so under other conditions. But nothing can be more appropriate in itself than the preaching of the Gospel in the open air, amidst favorable surroundings, on a fine Sunday evening in summer. It can scarcely be doubted that in many places hundreds might gather to listen to a sermon out of doors, who could hardly be induced to spend the hour within the church walls. We make the suggestion for what it may

-The Liberal party in the Province of Quebec has lost one of its leaders in the person of the Hon. Felix Geoffrion, who died recently at his residence in Vercheres, at the age of 62 years. Felix Geoffrion was born in Varennes, P.Q., on Oct. 4, 1832. After a brilliant course of studies he entered the notarial profession, of which he soon became one of the most eminent members. From 1854 to 1863 he was registrar of the county of Vercheres, and in the latter year was elected member of the House of Assembly for the same county. He held that position until the confederof the provinces in 1867, which date he has been regularly returned to the House of of Commons at every election. In 1874, he entered the Cabinet as Minister of Inland Revenue, under the Mackenzie Administration, but was obliged to resign office at the end of 1876, on account of serious illness, from the effects of which he never fully recovered. It was Mr. Geoffrion, who, in 1874, moved for a select committee to inquire into the difficulties existing in the Northwest Territories in 1869-70. He became chairman of that committee and prepared the elaborate report which was afterwards submitted to Parliament.

THE SENATE MUST GO.

Even those who believe in the theoretical possibility of the usefulness of a second legislative chamber, might go about the task of getting what they desire in a worse way than by first abolishing the Canadian Senate as it now exists. Is it possible to reform the present "Upper House" in any suitable way without first acting on Hamlet's advice to the players and reforming it altogether-reforming it out of existence? The strongest argument in favor of our Senatorial second chamber is not that it is non-partisan-for it is the opposite of nonpartisan; not that it is a safe filter through which it is well that legislation from the popular chamber should pass-for it has given manifestation of no such usefulness, The strongest argument that has been through the appointment of men of undoubted atively as extensive and aggressive as that ability and of wide legislative experience of the United States. General Booth is gained in the House of Commons or else- expected to visit this city among other where. That, indeed, was the idea originally put forth at the formation of our present Canadian constitution by its founders, such men as Sir John Macdonald and Hon. George Brown. It was distinctly promised that appointments would be made rrespective of party, alternately from one side and from the other. Under such an arrangement men of experience, of say the type of Hon. Davil Mills on the Liberal side, and men of similar gifts and standing on the Conservative side, could doubtless render service of value in a properly constituted and fairly selected second chamber. How far short of the ideal held up at Confederation the actual Senate of today is, need not be stated. If an irresistable agitation for the abolition of the Senate sweeps all before it, it will not be difficult to locate the responsibility. Whether, after the abolition of the Senate as at present constituted, it may be worth while to create another second chamber on sounder and fairer principles, can be de-

If the saw be true, frost will be here by the middle of September, for the katydid has been singing for several days. A Brantford Man's Narrow Escape From Death by Lightning.

BRANTFORD, Aug. 9. - During the thunder storm at 3:30 o'clock this morning a house on Henry street, just outside the limits, and occupied by Mr. Scroal, a teamster employed in the Waterous engine works, was struck by lightning.
Mr. and Mrs. Scroal were in bed when the thunder awoke them. The husband remembered that one of the windows in the sleeping room had been left open. Fearing that the rain might enter and spoil the furniture, he arose to close it. Just as he 6. The addition of 5,000 children to the did so the lightning struck the chimneys at the other end of the house. It came crashing down the stove pipe, bursting it, and threw open the doors of the stove. It flew past Mr. Scroal's head, just grazing him and singeing his whiskers on one side of his face. His skin was not burned, though he received a severe shock.

The lightning tore up the floor for some distance and apparently went to earth. It was a wonder under the circumstances that the house was not set on fire, more especially as it is a frame one. Both chimneys are of brick and were completely

LABOR AND THE BALLOT.

(Springfield (Mass.) Republican.) We recently received a communication from a workingman who said that while he heartily agreed that the strike had become useless and hurtful to his class, and that the ballot was the better weapon for use in the redress of any grievances, yet we were to remember that wealth had become great power, that it was used unscrupuously to affect legislation and the representatives of the working classes were very liable to be corrupted by it. This is very true. But what then? Hav-ing won possession of the ballot from the former governing forces in this country, must the wage class now be insured by some unknown power against the corruption of its leaders, who are put into official place to represent its demands? The workingman has at hand the same means of protection against the insidious power of unscrupulous wealth in legislation, and to the same degree, as other classes in the community have. And it will be true of him, as of other people, who are with him equally to be considered as toilers in the industrial field-that if he cannot thus protect himself with a free ballot in his possession, he will only show forth his unfitness to exercise this right of the citizen.

Let us take a case in point. One of the most conspicuous so-called representatives of labor in the Massachusetts Legislature is a notorious jobber and agent of such corporate interests as may seek his favor. He makes great professions of attachment to the laborer's cause and is ready at any opportune time to talk most glibly and eloquently of this attachment. And then he lets himself quietly fall into the hands of selfish and designing interests, which find him one of the most useful men to them in the whole legislative body. He was especially conspicuous in the last Legislature in leading lobbyist raids on the common interest; but he will come up for renomination again this fall with the same glib tongue, and he will tell the workingmen among his constituents of his devotion to "labor," and he will rail against capital and draw stirring pictures of how it is crushing labor. And then the workingmen will no doubt turn in and elect him again. Now until "labor" is prepared to exercise some of the attention, the organized effort and the agitation which is commonly devoted to working up a successful strike, upon marking out the recreant representatives of the people and degrading them, it will never gain anything by the ballot and it does not deserve to. There is simply nothing more discouraging about this whole matter than the way organized labor has allowed itself to be led around by the nose by designing, self-seeking, smoothtalking men. And in this time of searching publicity given to the words and acts of public men, there is no excuse for it. What wage workers especially should do now, therefore, is not only to prefer the ballot to the strike, but to bring to the exercise of the franchise more intelligence, discrimination and independence than they have seemed hitherto to show. Let them give some attention to the characters of the men who stand for public office, and look well into the pretenses of those who come forward in the name of labor. The first thing to be done is to purge the legislative halls and demagogues and corruptionists, and the labor organizations cannot set about the work too quickly.
