Admitting that Austria-Hungary could be induced to give up her provinces inhabited by Italians, as for instance Trent and Trieste, which is considered most unlikely, this would still not be enough for Italy, according to the arguments of those who would like to see their country fighting on the side of France, Russia and Great Britain.

The possible forcing of the Dardaneles by the naval forces of the Allies is regarded here as a prelude to the parallels of the parallels and provided to the parallels and provided prices. The demand a good demand.
