DRAMA LEAGUE EXECUTIVE.

At a recent meeting of the new Drama League executive, plans were made for next year's work, which will probably include the presentation of a play by the league in November. J. S. Meredith and his committee have charge of arrangements for the production for the year. Wm. Pope, president of the league, and Col. Frank Ware were appointed a committee to arrange for the regular programs of the league.

Cynthia Grey's Mail-Box

"His heaven alone that is given away. 'Tis only God may be had for the asking. There is no price set on the lavish summer. And June may be had by the poorest corner."

An Old Boxite.

Dear Cynthia Grey and Readers,—I have been nearly two years since I have written to your Mail-Box, so thought I would write again. I have changed my address since writing, but I will keep my old pen name. I have never noticed that anyone has taken it, and I believe that I was the first to use it, but perhaps I am wrong. Since then I have noticed several other imitations.

I received the stocking foot pattern long ago, but have never sent anything to the Sick Children's Hospital fund, so I am enclosing "four bits" in stamps and hope it will be acceptable, as this seemed the easiest way to send it. I would also like three sachets if you have them, please one each for mother, a friend and myself, and if not, will please forward them if more are sent, in inclosed stamped envelope? I wonder if it would be possible for me to get the recipe for canned beef which Enderby sent in a long time ago. It was so good, and I am very sorry that I was careless enough to not have it in my possession when it was printed in your paper.

Some of the letters are very interesting. The discussion on books is good. I think, and some people's tastes in food are surprising. One reader did not like "Rabbit" or "Gone With the Wind" or "The Outcasts of Poker Flat"—two of the best—and other classes "St. Elmo" as trash! If there had been a booby prize offered for letters to the Mail-Box, I am quite certain that the little lady who takes so much of a certain Franklin card, and who evidently belonged to the "get-rich-quick-Wallingford" (for people who are accustomed to wealth do not flaunt it), would have taken the prize for sure with her first letters.

My letter is rather lengthy, so wishing bright happy days to all the shut-ins and sick and ones, more letters from our best writers, and sending love from my own little folk to all the other children, as ever. IMA HOGG.

Ans.—Am pleased to have your visit again, Ima Hogg, and such a generous note you brought with you. Thank you very much. Am mailing sachets as requested.

A Generous Gift.

Dear Miss Grey,—Better late than never, so here I am with my note for the S. C. H. Hope I am not too late for a package of cinnamon vine bulbs or seeds, whichever they are, also one of the sachets.

I wonder if it would help any of the Mail-Box friends to know that a S. C. H. fund. B. VILLES.

Ans.—Am mailing bulbs and sachet as requested. Thank you for such a large note, also for the timely hint.

Dear Miss Grey,—Please find inclosed 15 cents for three cinnamon vine bulbs. The extra 5 cents for postage. About the time I sent my letter about some of the country? She calls herself Curtis. We did not see her name in the paper, and wondered whether you received the packet.

The other night I read a letter in the paper written by a school teacher. I cannot find the paper, so will try to answer from memory. Let me ask what part of the country she is from? Does she come from the city? Do you know, dear friend, that in the quiet of the country we have better chance to meditate on the love of God and of the wonders of his works. The 19th Psalm says: "The heavens declare the glory of the Lord, and the firmament sheweth his handiwork." And where do you get a better chance to study these beauties than in the country? Then, dear friend, what about the young men in their work-clothes? Could you not love a man as much when he wears the overalls as when dressed in tuxedo or serge? You know his work is honorable, and, oh, well, I could write for ever so long, but will have to stop: the men are coming in to dinner. A LUREL.

Ans.—Your sister's letter could not have reached the Mail-Box, Laurel. Am mailing bulbs. Thanks for note.

Dear Miss Grey,—I am enclosing some scarlet runner seeds, also mite for the S. C. H. I think your plan of helping the hospital a very novel and interesting one. Could I have some poppy or any other seeds? TENNESSEE.

Ans.—Thank you, Tennessee, for seeds and hospital mite. Am mailing your poppy seeds.

FOR LOVE OF BETTY

[BY MAY CHRISTIE.]

(Copyright, 1921, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

CIVIL-TWO LETTERS.

The maid with Trevor's letter to Betty hurried across the fields towards the Red Cottage. She knew Miss Betty Gordon well by sight. How strange Mr. Trevor had looked.

But luck was on her side tonight. For, after ten minutes' walking, she espied Miss Gordon, driving leisurely along the lanes in her high dog-cart. The maid ran across the fields towards her, waving the letter frantically. "I was to give you this, from Mr. Trevor," she panted. "He was most particular that it was to be delivered into your own hands, miss."

Betty had stopped to hear what the girl said. But now she made a move as though she would go on again. She didn't want to take the letter. She didn't want any further pain and humiliation. She had had enough to bear.

But the look of surprise on the maid's face caused Betty to change her mind. If she drove off, refusing to accept the letter, her action would be the gossip of the servants' hall in the Manor House for many days to come.

"Thank you very much," she said coolly, taking the envelope from the girl. "There won't be any answer—don't wait."

She slipped the letter into her pocket, and drove away. But when the maid was out of sight, she pulled up, and drawing the letter out, read it carefully.

"Your friend, Mr. Davon, needs have no anxiety about redeeming the ring," she read. "I send it back to you. Where was the ring? With the trembling lips she took over the envelope which had contained Trevor's letter. Yes, there lay the gleaming circlet, tucked into a corner.

Again and again she re-read the sentences of the letter. What did it mean, that phrase, "redeeming the ring"? Davon had insured it for her. How could he be anxious about redeeming it? It was a business term, of course.

She was ignorant in pawn-broking matters. But why had Jack Trevor sent her back the ring? And why did he write of "happy dreams" that were "for ever at an end"? If he was engaged to another girl, he couldn't possibly still be wanting her?

There was a mystery somewhere that she didn't understand. Mysteries were miserable, torturing things! She would drive straight home and write to Trevor, telling him how surprised she was, and send him back his ring. She didn't want it now, dark when she reached the shelter of the Red Cottage. Aunt Marion had gone to bed. Betty was somehow glad of that. She couldn't act as a hater, but she was sure that the misery on her pretty face was very hard to hide, particularly from fond and understanding eyes.

She stole up to her room, and wrote till nearly midnight. Nothing must be omitted in this letter—the last that I shall ever write to him!" Betty told herself. Each happening since that wonderful evening by the stile was clearly outlined in her memory. The two anonymous

THE IONIC IN AN UPRIGHT PIANO.

One of the most artistic designs in the beautiful art upright pianos manufactured by Ye Olde Firme Heintzman & Co., Limited, 242 Dundas Street, London, is the Ionic design in mahogany. This instrument is a handsome piece of furniture in any home, but best of all it is a complete musical instrument, possessing a rare and rich tone and touch that is characteristic of the pianos bearing the name of Heintzman & Co.
