and the rest of the expedition were left at Fort Reliance, all well—they are to leave for England by way of Hudson's Bay. We are glad to say, that no mortality or accident occurred to may of the persons actually accompanying the expedition, although one of the volunteer Artillerymen, Williamsen, who was somewhat advanced in years, and who was unable longer to bear the fatigues and hardships of the journey, unfortunately died when on his way back to Hudson's Bay station. He was accompanied by two Canaoians, who were well acquainted with the country, but having separated himself from them, he must have wandered out of the path, and perished. The following are the particulars as far as we are enabled to procure them for to day: Fulton street .- Broke out in 111, 113, and 115, Fulton, (five story buildings, occupied as book stores, printing offices, and book binders.) all totally destroyed. A man named Blanchard jumped from the 4th story of 113, with his clothes on fire, and died in about five minutes after striking the ground .- This may have been considered rash, but it must be recollected that the fire broke out at an early hour in the morning when all were in their beds-that the buildings are extremely high, and the rooms and passages being small and filled with smoke, rendered escape by the staircase next to impossible.
