Can we end theso dosultory remarks with a colophon moro pleasing than that provided in a quotation from a book recently put forth by Dr. G. W. Fortescue, professor of Anglo-Saxon in Tuthill University, at Four Cornors, Iowa? "Porspicuity, simplicity, and carnestness," says tho Hawkeye savant, "are primary essentials to the nequirement or conservation of 4 virilo and felicitous style, and theso qualities prodominate only when an adherence to the Anglo-Saxon idiom is maintained with serupulons portinacity, for in the oxercita ion and adhibitstion of the idinm there abounds a rectilinearity, a prepollence, a potentiality, and a probity compared with which all ambiguous and convoluted rhetorical artitices and pyrotechnics (dazaling though they be in their coruscating pulchritude and scintillant fulguration, ma however suasory and protreptical their ostentations and sacchariferous obliqua ion) simk into that paltry, evanescent condition of impotent absurdity which, in the presence of the sonorous ventosity of Boreas, characterises the humble instrument which is operated to the furtherance of flame by the haman organs of prehension." - Ruyene Field in Chicago 1 imes.

A solid, sensible-looking woman, who was bound east, entered tho baggage rooms of the Third strect depot leading a dog. nond asked:
"Can this dog go in the car with me?"
"No, ma'um."
"Has he got to go in the baggage car?"
"Yes'm."
"Is it extra?"
"Fifty cents."
"Well, its a shamo!"
"Yes'm, but its the rule."
She wallied about for five minutes, the dog smelling at her heels, and then returned to say:
"There are threc of us-myself, the dog and my husband."
"Yes."
"If my husband went in the baggage car couldn't the dog ride in the scat with me?"
She managed to choke down her indignation when told hat no such change could be effected, but later on, in the waiting room, she was giving her husband fits, and it was probably becsuse he was satisfied with the rule of the road-Detroit Free Press.

Eximusiast-"Art can never im" prove on nature."

Dentist-"Can't, eh? Don't you think that set of false teeth I made you is an improvenent on your natural stumps?"

Sue-"Did you visit Pompeii while abroad, Mr. Vabash?"
Mr. Wabash (of Chicago-"Yes and it's about the slowest place I ever struck. I s'pose there's more business done in Chicago in one day than has been done there for for ten years."

On: Harvard Square.- Student (to servant)-"I thought you had finished sweening my room."

Boston Servant Ginl-"Beg your pardon, sir, but I was just decomposing."

Student-" What?"
Boston Serrant Girl-"I was re. turning to dust."
