NASSAU,
BAHAMAS.
July 3, 1933.

Sir Arthur Currie, LL.D.,
McGill University,
Montreal, Canada.

Dear Sir,

We are anxious to acquire some information relative to the requirements for summer school purposes and, if possible, to make such adjustments in our amenities in Nassau as will permit us to place before the leaders of the educational field their availability for such a programme.

Nassau in the Bahamas is, as you doubtless know, accessible to the United States through New York, Jacksonville, and Miami. It has a rich historical background linked up to that of the Americas from the sixteenth century onwards. It has various scholastic and hotel properties which from July to September would be available for study groups.

Climatically it would permit outdoor class work in the tree and palm shaded courts and gardens and from an economical viewpoint to those undertaking extra mural work.

Your name was suggested to us as one likely to advise upon the matter and we take the liberty of writing to ask your opinion.

Thanking you,

Yours faithfully,

Hugh Bell

Director of Publicity,
Development Board.
