Economic Advertising Says Retailers Are Pledged to Buy Certain Number.

A recent number of Economic Advertising contains the following com-of the retailers to handle this article "It appears that one of the largest wholesale provision merchants has, for some time past, had numerous agents out covering in a most thoro manner the whole of the country ad-use them or not.

"It is difficult to realize that the shortage of eggs that recurs annually could be sufficiently serious to com-pel dealers to tie themselves up to such a proposition as this, but the facts are vouched for by irrefutable authorities, that the majority of re-clude in future advertising the names and addresses of those dealers out-side the 'ring' at whose stores the egg substitute is available.

"And if these stores are fairly well scattered over the city, it should prove the means of introducing an article for which there is bound to be a steady demand."—Economic Advertising.

"A situation has recently come to our notice which instances very forcibly a peculiar difficulty experienced by a Toronto manufacturer in obtaining efficient local distribution for his product.

"The article in question is a quostitute for fresh eggs, and by independent tests has been proved to elive up to all that is claimed for it.

"Coming, as it has done, on the market just at the psychological moment—when the winter season is upon us, and the price of fresh eggs away up to the forties—it was only natural to expect a, heavy demand for an efficient newspaper publicity.

"But the salesmen of the company in calling upon the local dealers to introduce the article met with an appairly and lack of interest which was difficult to understand, and no logical solution of the problem of overcoming it presented itself.

A Paying Department.

"The objection that the substitution of the new product for the fresh egg would run the latter trade and destroy a most productic to the grover's business was met by showing the dealer that he stood the species of the egg substitute than by retailing fresh eggs, and to save the loss by breakage and stale eggs.

"Why then, did the species in a majority of instances turn down the new proposition istone cold."

"It was only by the merest chance that the reason for the unwillingness of the retailers to bandle this article was discovered.
