

column. A good palpator can easily discover, in which organ the lack of, or excessive current is; thereby going directly to the cause. If he is a graduate of the Palmer School he has handled almost every species of abnormal bone to be had, from the world supply, and knows every slightest indenture, groove or hollow. He has been drilled until he considers a normal bone and a normal body; a thing of beauty and a joy forever. Its price is above rubies.

We do not dissect in our Chiropractic School, because we believe, that the instant supreme intelligence deems the body, too abnormal to live in. She, (our innate power) leaves the body, and the collapse of the abnormal tissues is so great that the position of the organs is out of all comparison, with the living, vibrating tissue. So, we trace nerves in the living body, from the spinal column to the physical organ, or from the organ to the spine. We have no difficulty in locating the cause, as the nerve from its emanation, from the foramina between the vertebrae will be tender to the touch, all the way to the organ.

The School from which we were graduated, is in Davenport, Iowa, U.S.A. It is the Fountain Head of Chiropractic Philosophy, Science and Art; equipped with the most perfect collection of abnormal bones. There, you will find the most careful logical teaching (inductive and deductive). The ability of the Faculty (B. J. Palmer, D.C.P.H.C., Developer of Chiropractic Philosophy, Science and Art. Author of five volumes of Chiropractic; manager of Chiropractic Magazine. President of Palmer School.

M. P. Brown, M.D., D.C., Editor, Chiropractic Magazine; Director, afternoon Clinic, P.S.C. Registrar. M. H. Palmer, D.C., Prof. of Anatomy, Clerk of evening Clinic. T. J. Owens, D.C., Assistant Editor, Chiropractic Magazine; Business Manager; Corresponding Secretary. C. R. McAdams, D.C., Department of Nerve Tracing; Director of evening Clinic; Assistant, afternoon Clinic. J. H. Wishart, D.C., Department of Palpation; Assistant afternoon Clinic. Elizabeth Heath, Clerk of afternoon Clinic; P.S.C. Cashier.—Is not questioned by those who attend the P.S.C.