

Loves and delights around thee swim,
And fondly circle every limb.
Hide, love, that bosom's snowy white,
Which too luxurious wounds my sight.
My rolling eyes grow dim, I feel
A languid lightness o'er me steal :
I faint—ah ! cruel, dost thou fly,
And leave me sinking thus, to die?
