

The wise and royal preacher thus closes his weird and piercing sermon, "For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil." (Eccl. 12).

The last of the four major prophets relates his sublime vision, "I beheld till the thrones were cast down and the Ancient of Days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of His head like the fine wool. His throne was like the fiery flame and His wheels as burning fire. A fiery stream issued and came forth before Him, thousands ministered unto Him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before Him. The judgment was set and the books were opened." (Dan. 7).

The last of the great line of prophets declares his vision in language identical with the foregoing, "I saw a great white throne, and Him that sat upon it, from whose face the heavens and the earth fled away, and there was no place found for them, and I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God. The judgment was set and the books were