JUDGE FORCED AN ANSWER. Witness Didn't Like to Admit Sharp Practices.

D. Mann, not the railroad magnate, went up against a snag in the nonlury court yesterday when Justice Ciute was hearing the action brought against him by R. Haslett, a Toronto dentist. It appears that Mann, after taking a turn at farming, embossing, undertaking and hardware seiling, took the "back to the land fever" in January last, and accordingly sold his hardware business and put the proceeds into a farm in Aldborough Township, which is valued at $7500. Haslett alleged that Mann had claims against him which had not been satisfied and asked the court for an order declaring the land as held in trust for the creditors. He claimed also that Mann had put the farm in his wife's name to defraud these creditors, and so Mrs. Maggle A. Mann was put on as co-defendant. When Mann was put on the stand Justice Clute asked him if he did not intend to pay his debts, or if he could give security.

And judgment was given at once, directing that $1450 be given to the creditors, and that the part of the farm held by Mann be sold and the credi-

THE WEATHER

Yesterday was, on the whole, a pretty fine sort of a day, as you may have noticed. But there were some peculiar features about it that might have escaped the person who just pays enough attention to the weather to know whether it's raining or snowing or blowing.

It was a day somewhat after the style of a coquettish girlie; now smiling, then frowning, then weeping and more frowning. First thing in the morning the sky was a mottled, leaden canopy that seemed to threaten dire things—snow, rather than rain—in the near future. Very shortly after, however, it brightened up and took on its most beautiful appearance: a deep, rich blue; ocean-like; dotted here and there with big, fluffy, wooly islands. Then these were quickly switched away as if upon a slide in a moving picture machine. The big dome then seemed inclined to show its ability as a quick-change artist, for it appeared in a sombre, heavy garment that would almost send a chill to the heart of an optimist. It followed this with a heavy leaden appearance again without the mottles, and then, as if ashamed of such frivolous conduct, it at at once resumed its normal, sweet blueness, with here and there a beautiful white haze like a filmy lace material. Meanwhile, the sun was acting the part of the versatile gentleman, for first he smiled, then frowned, then hid himself completely, breaking out again in all his brightness.

In the afternoon it was coolerous for overceats and around frowned, then hid himself completely, breaking out again in all his brightness.

In the afternoon it was cool enough for overcoats, and around about 3 o'clock Jupiter got busy and watered everything within reach for an hour or more. Just before the rain fell the sky took on on that same old dark lead color, but it was beautified by occasional streaks of gold and silver.

Thruout the day the wind added zest to any appetite any-body might have had toward the addition of heavier things to wear.

The evening was slightly damp, too, but, as I said before, on the whole, it was a pretty decent kind of a day.

A Central Bureau.

Mr. Arnold suggested a central bureau be advertised in outside papers, and that the bureau be advertised in outside papers, and that the city engineer last forever.

Mr. O'Meara said that a campaign of slander had been started. He wanted the synod to send a delegation to Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He as a noble man would surely do his best to kill the villain who was preying on the Yukon. The motion was adopted and a delegation will wait upon Sir Wilfrid on Friday.
