SCOTT'S DEATH IN ANTARCTIC IS RECALLED BY AMUNDSEN TRIP

Explorer Frozen to Death on Attempt to Rediscover
South Pole

There is a cold goddess who is hidden among the eternal snows of the polar regions, and for every man who returns from her domain another must remain there forever.

Raold Amundsen is somewhere up in the white emptiness with his airplane. Will he come back from his trip to the North Pole? Or will he add his name to the long list of those who sought the goddess of eternal winter and met the specter of death?

Recalls Scott's Death.

Amundsen's adventure recalls that of Captain Robert F. Scott, whose tragic adventure was so closely bound up with Amundsen's discovery of the South Pole. Scott reached the pole, by dog sledges, just five weeks after Amundsen did, in 1912. He photographed Amundsen's cairn and flag and started back. The antarctic winter struck with unleashed fury. Food and fuel gave out. Scott and his men plodded on with frozen feet. Then a blizzard made progress impossible. They were only 11 miles from a supply depot, but they could not continue. Months later their frozen bodies were found near a long-dead camp-fire.

Balloon Disappears.

Others, too, found an unseen death in the polar lands. Strangely like Amundsen's adventure was that of a Swedish aeronaut, S. A. Andree, who in 1897, sailed north from Spitzbergen in a balloon. The balloon is still up there, somewhere, its flabby envelope encased in ice and its occupant eternally buried in the white, unbroken silence.

Die of Disease.

Sir Ernest Shackleton was another. After a life time of exploration in the ice fields, he died of disease on his ship while at sea near the antarctic continent in 1922.

Sir John Franklin was still another. In 1845 he sailed from England with two ships, the Erebus and the Terror, to explore north of Greenland. His ship was sighted in Baffin Bay months later by a whaler, and then the cold arctic silence settled down. Relief expeditions were sent out from America and England. It was 1858, however, before the secret was solved. Franklin had died after his ships became locked in ice. His men sought to escape over land, and all perished. Another victim? Now the north has beckoned again. Amundsen, who planted his flag at the South Pole, has gone to the top of the world. Will he come back? Will he add another chapter to the thrilling stories of narrow escapes from the arctic's clutches? Or will he be just one more to fall a victim to the white goddess of the north, who reigns where there is no color but white and where icy gales howl through the darkness of an everlasting winter?

TRIFLING WITH DEATH

Not a sinecure is the job of reptile curator. But that's the post of Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars of the Bronx (N. Y.) Zoo, and there's no snake too deadly for him to handle. Here he is shown with a green mamba, one of the most fearsome of African reptiles. The mamba hangs from trees and strikes at those passing beneath. His bite is almost certain death.
