HEAVY COUNTY VOTE. avy vote in the county was pro dicted this morning by the workers in East Saint John and Lancaster. Up to noon there had been a much larger vote polled than usual and both sides were working hard to get every available. ballot. Both sides were quite confident that the majority of ballots cast were for their candidates and both were optimistic of the final result tonight.

BABE AT BOOTH.

The Babes in the Wood? now bemes "The Babe at the Booth." "Get to vote out—and get it early" must we been the slogan of one zealous and worker this morning who went a city home and found that the other of the family could not leave eause of the need of caring for her by. Nothing daunted the ward worksaid filled a nursing bottle, placed the mother and baby in an auto and one them to the booth, where, while a mother duly exercised her franse, the worker held the baby. Needsto say, the baby's chief concern not so much whether the Government would win or lose, but whether a bottle was tipped at the right angle feeding. BABE AT BOOTH.

DRINK OF ANOTHER KIND. DRINK OF ANOTHER KIND.

Two men from whom wafted odors reminiscent of a distillery were hotly discussing the pros and cons of the election yesterday afternoon about 8 o'clock in King Square. Just as they were settling the fate of the two parties one said to his friend, "Got anything to drink?" "Sure" remarked the friend, "any cops in sight?"

A survey revealed all well, so a flask eppeared from a hip pocket and both men tipped the bottle and the gurgles of the liquid refreshment could be plainly heard by astonished citizens. The flask disappeared and the discussion was again resumed although the points made were vague. Finally the man with the flask remarked to his companion, "You're drunk." "I'm not as intoxicated—hic—ash—his—ash might be. Gimme 'nother swig." might be. Gimme 'nother swig."

The flask was again produced, this time without any search for officers, and between them they 'killed' it and the "dud" was tossed hehind a tree. After warning his friend to wait on the bench, the owner of the flask staggered off, with the avowed intention of visiting a "particular" friend and securing another bottle of booze. "Got to make hay while the 'lection lasts," was the parting shot.

There comes a report from the Loch Lomond pienic, held on Saturday afternoon, that there were strong demands. made upon those in charge of the distribution of ice cream cones from a copious supply that had been taken to the pienic grounds. They may have been exaggerating, but some who were there said that one attendant at the pienic disposed of 25 cones and voted the pienic a pronounced success from that standpoint at least.

A lady stopped outside the Court House this morning, fumbled in her purse and remarked in a dismayed tone, "I can't vote, I've lost my ticket." When assured that she could obtain another "ticket" inside she was much relieved.

It was reported from Hampton that one of the polling booths all the ballots were of one brand.

FAMILY WELL KNOWN. The Truemans have been coming back to Saint John every year and are included in the city's summertime population. Their home in Salem has been a most hospitable one for the entertainment of Saint John friends and relatives, and the deceased physician, who is a native of Boston, enjoyed the acquaintance of a very wide circle in this city and its environs. He was a man of amiable traits and in the early forenoon today was chatting and faternizing with neighbors on the Belmont shore.

A PROMINENT PHYSICIAN. Dr. Trueman was examining physician in the mental department of the State prisons in Massachusetts and was located at Danvers, Mass., in that capacity for a considerable period. As a psychological expert he held an accredited position. He leaves a mother and sister at Bristol Ferry, R. I.; was a nephew of Dickson Trueman, South Wharf merchant; has a brother in Boston, was a member of the Masonic fraternity and several medical associations in New England.

THE SURVIVING FAMILY. His family consists of Mrs. Trueman and Elsbeth, aged 15, and Evelyn (Sue), aged 18. After the accident the scene was visited by Rev. R. G. Fulton, pastor of Centenary church, of which Mrs. Trueman is a member; by Rev. Mr. Pinkerton, Methodist, of Fairville, and close friends.

Tremma is a member by Rev. Mr. Pinkerton, Methodist, of Fairville, and Close friends.
