Britain Lays Keels For Huge Airships To Mother Fighters

New Type Craft Will Send Out Small Planes Against Enemy.

London, July 1 (by mail).—Keels are now being laid in Great Britain for huge rigid airships which will have about the clouds with a number of small fighting machines on board ready to launch at the foe, says an aeronautical expert in the London Daily Chronicle.

The task of these new machines in war, he says, will be to carry aloft to immense heights and to transport, if necessary, thousands of miles, squadrons of swift, deadly, steel-built "at- tack planes." These will be launched from high above the clouds and will rush at 200 miles an hour and more earthward to harry other aircraft and raid the commerce of the seas.

"The airships will have the power, lacking in a small machine," the writer says, "of long distance flights at a great altitude, while, on the other hand, the small planes they carry will be able to outfly and out-fight any machine laden for a long journey."

In the case of specially organized attacks by these formidable air-borne fighters on planes carried at sea by mother ships, the tactics of the craft sent darting down from airships will be to dive pell-mell on the surface-launched opponents and strike them dead blows before they can gain the vantage point of altitude.

Height is Key to Victory

"Height in air warfare is the key to victory, and these airship-carrier fighters will have the advantage of be-

A Sea-Going Aerodrome.

Great Britain has completed the first sea-going vessel in the world designed specially for the transport of aircraft. She has a displacement of 10,500 tons and carries seven six-inch guns, four four-inch, and a number of smaller guns. Besides torpedo armament, the new vessel is fitted with twenty air-planes, enabling her to carry twenty air-planes, which will be raised to the taking-off decks by means of electric elevators.

Another advance in aerial efficiency is the construction, for the British air ministry, of huge seaplanes with a speed of 125 miles an hour. One of the latest types has a wing span of 112 feet and carries nearly two tons of gasoline. It is fitted with twin Condor engines of 1,800 horsepower each, driving twin propellers.
