Lord Mayor's Salary at That Figure Too Small for Demands on His Purse

London, Dec. 15.—To be lord mayor of London and live on $50,000 a year, the official allowance for maintaining the high dignity of that office, is a problem which most chief magistrates find beyond them. It was with the object of obtaining inquiry into this financial puzzle that the Hantschell moved at the court of common council meeting at the Guildhall that the general purposes committee should be instructed to consider and report "on the question of the expenses of the mayoralty."

This matter, however, the court decided to leave in abeyance, at any rate, for a time, but agreed that the general purposes committee should consider sundry alterations and improvements at the Mansion House.

An idea of what it really costs to be lord mayor of London was given in an interview by Sir William Trevelyan, who held the office in 1908. "I have heard of a case," he said, "where a lord mayor spent $150,000 more than his allowance, and of others where an additional $100,000 was expended. I know myself perfectly well how easy it is to spend $50,000 above the allowance. More than that I cannot say, except that I do not think it possible for any lord mayor to keep to his official $50,000."

A few of the chief items upon the expenses side in the balance sheet of a lord mayor of London were supplied by an alderman who has passed through the office. The approximate figures were: Half cost of lord mayor's show and banquet, the balance being paid by the two sheriffs, $10,000; official dinners at Mansion House, numbering eight to ten, $2,500; private dinner and luncheon parties to friends, $12,500; Mansion House balls, $6,000.

"Of course," said this ex-lord mayor, "there is really no limit to a lord mayor's expenditure. It depends entirely upon his own inclination." Some of the other expenses that a lord mayor has to meet are the salaries of secretaries, the wages of the Mansion House servants, numbering between forty and fifty, and the upkeep of horses and carriages, apart from the state coach. Many, too, are the demands of charities upon a lord mayor, and it is estimated that it is impossible for a lord mayor to keep his expenditure below $65,000, or $15,000 above the official salary.

DISCOVERS MICROBE OF CATTLE DISEASE

Berlin Bacteriologist Makes Statement of Importance at Surgeons' Conference

Berlin, Dec. 18.—At the annual congress of the Prussian veterinary surgeons, a Berlin bacteriologist, Dr. Siegel, read a paper in which he demonstrated that he had discovered the microbe which causes foot-and-mouth disease. Dr. Siegel has been working at the subject for years, and his microbe, which he named "Cytorrhoea," has stood all the tests based on Koch's law. The doctor said that he had found the microbe both in the blood and in characteristic blisters on the gums of animals suffering from the disease. He has also cultivated the microbe and discovered that animals which have been given the disease artificially by means of inoculation with his microbe are less liable than others not inoculated to catch the disease naturally by infection—that is to say, he claims to be able to render animals to a certain extent immune against foot-and-mouth disease.

The Prussian government has employed every means at its disposal for the last eighteen months to discover the microbe responsible for foot-and-mouth disease, but without success, and several representatives of the ministry for the interior were present when Doctor Siegel read his paper.

You'll Sleep More Soundly
If You Keep Healthy With
Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills

The man or woman with a good appetite, sound digestion, and bowels and kidneys working right, is never troubled much with sleeplessness. It is when the bowels become constipated and the liver and kidneys sluggish that the trouble begins.

Lazy liver and constipated bowels quickly bring on biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches, making a sound, refreshing night's sleep impossible. Or the inactive kidneys allow the blood to become loaded with uric acid, which causes rheumatism, with all its sleep-debilitating torments.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, taken regularly, induce sweet and dreamless sleep by keeping all these organs active and regular. The headaches disappear, the digestive system becomes good again, the blood is purified and perfect health returns.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have been a favorite household remedy in Canada for over half a century, and they are in daily use throughout the world. Being purely vegetable they are safe for young and old. Made by W. H. Connelock Co., Ltd., Brockville, Ont., and sold by all dealers at 25c. a box.

Pardon for Good Conduct Comes to Man Who Committed Brutal Murder

Milan, Dec. 15.—One of the grimmest murder stories of modern times enters into the life history of Antonio Tozzi, a butcher from the Abruzzi Mountains, to whom the King of Italy has just granted a free pardon for good conduct after spending more than twenty-six years in the galleys. Antonio, in partnership with his father, owned the principal meat depot in Montetorondo, where his pretty sister Carolina was being courted by a 19-year-old youth, Domenico Poggi. Between the two families interested in the courtship a feud arose and waxed so fierce that Tozzi and his son Poggi to revenge themselves with diabolical cunning.

On a glorious May evening in 1883 young Poggi came to the shop and Tozzi, who was then a young man, and his son appeared to be in a better humor than usual, and while the father held the plaid earnestly for a reconciliation, Tozzi and his son dragged the victim by the hair to a subterranean slaughter-house, on the pretext of showing him some fine animals freshly killed. On hearing his father's footsteps in the rear Antonio, approaching his sister's sweetheart from behind, dealt him a terrific blow on the back of the head with a huge hammer used for filling bullocks. Poggi dropped unconscious and Antonio dragged the victim by the hair to a block, where he severed the head, the father holding the body over his shoulder, while the son, who had been waiting in a basket and burying the same at nightfall on the hillside proved their undying loyalty to the father by dragging the body to the place of execution. The father did before the trial was finished, but Antonio, who had stoutly protested his innocence, made a clean breast of the crime after he had been condemned to lifelong imprisonment.

IN THE NATIONAL GALLERY

London, Dec. 15.—The King has lent to the National Gallery his panel of "Two Saints" by Perugino, and also the portrait of "The Shipbuilder and His Wife" by Rembrandt. The loan will be extended until January 28.

The former picture is placed to the left of the "Trinity," by Perugino's great altar piece. Above are two panels of angels, which also formed part of the original composition. That on the left has been lent by Lady Henry Somerset, that on the right by the Countess Brownlow. The group is hung in Room 11 at Trafalgar Square. The Rembrandt is placed in Room XIII. The "Trinity" (which is in the form of a cross) was purchased for the nation at the Davenport Bromley sale in 1893 for $10,000. The trustees have also accepted from Earl Cathcart the loan for a period of not less than two years, of his portrait by Romney of Louis Cathcart, Countess Mansfield. This picture has been hung in Room XXI.

Will power and won't power are much alike.

MOTOR CAR IN A MURDER MYSTERY

French Police Run Clews Down to Nothing—False Number Was Used on Car

Paris, Dec. 15.—A motor car bearing the registration number 701-82 plays a prominent part in a strange murder mystery which the French police are now investigating. On Monday morning a gamekeeper patrolling a wood between Melun and Montereau, (forty miles from Paris) heard two shots fired, apparently on an adjacent road. Instead of finding the poachers he expected to encounter he made a remarkable discovery. A man wearing a motor cap and overcoat was bending over a figure prostrate in the snow.

Near by stood a large motor-car with thrubbling engines. At the sight of the gamekeeper the stranger made a sudden spring for the motor-car and, seizing the steering wheel, disappeared at a furious pace. The gamekeeper, however, was able to note the number of the car.

The man on the ground had been shot and was at his last gasp, and all around him the snow was red with blood. On being transported to the nearest doctor he expired after murmuring a few words in Italian which those present did not understand.

The mysterious motor-car was subsequently found abandoned by the roadside in the village street of Mosay, a few miles away. The villagers saw the machine break down, and its occupant, whose description tallies with that of the man the gamekeeper saw, after vainly trying to start the engine, walked to the railway station of L'Esneault, where all trace of him was lost.

It has now been discovered that the car bore a false number for 701-82 belongs to a motor and cycle agent in Rouen, on the road to Lyons, who was using his car at the moment that the abandoned machine was found. Nothing is known about the supposed murderer or the dead man. Inquiries at a Paris tailoring establishment, where the clothes found on the body were made, showed that the victim's name is Mandino, but nothing is known of such a person at the address he gave to the tailors. Robbery can hardly have been the motive of the crime, for nearly $100 was found on the body.

The police believe that the murderer was an anarchist who lived in Lyons and made a specialty of stealing bicycles and motor-cars, changing their appearance and selling them. Probably the men were accomplices and had brought off a coup and quarrelled over the plunder.

ALLAN, LARKIN AND O'BRIEN

Dublin, Dec. 15.—The anniversary of the execution of Allan, Larkin and O'Brien was celebrated in Dublin by a procession through some of the principal streets to Glasnevin Cemetery, where a monument to the three men was erected. The procession was much larger than those of recent years, owing to the presence of a large contingent of the Irish Transport Workers' Union, who were accompanied by James Larkin, members of the A. S. H. Liffordians, the National Foresters and other bodies.

Having entered the cemetery the procession filed past the cenotaph of Allan, Larkin, and O'Brien and graves of Stephens, O'Leary, McManus, and other Fenians, on which wreaths were deposited.

WIZARD EDISON SHOWS ARMY OFFICERS NEW INVENTION.

OFFICERS AND MARINES AT EDISON PLANT, ORANGE.
① MR. EDISON ② COMMANDER GEORGE F. COOPER.
③ WILLIAM R. HUTCHINSON

Thomas A. Edison and his engineering corps, at West Orange, N. J., were hosts a few days ago to two hundred men from the Brooklyn Navy Yard, who are in the electrical class there. The sailors saw demonstrations of the new storage battery for use in submarines, a recent invention by Mr. Edison, to prevent explosions in under-water craft.

The tests of the new device were conducted by William R. Hutchinson, chief engineer of the works and Mr. Edison's personal representative. Commander George F. Cooper, U. S. N., headed the delegation.
