The mining engineers of California take advantage of this fact to throw strong jets of wafe upon the vast places of hard bles gravel, that contain gold. This is done to dissolve it, and wash it down through spout sondain gold. This is done to dissolve it, and wash it down through spout sondain gold. This is done to dissolve it, and wash it down through spout contains quicknilver in grooves made in the bottom, and, as gold has an 'affinity' for quicknilver, the particles of the precious metal are caught by it and held in safety, while the loose gravel and dust is washed away.

The honge pipe that brings the water from the mountains to the placer below, has at the end a kineckle joint, and to that is attached a huge nozels, something like those used at the end of the hose of fire-engines, by which the firoman directs the water upon a fire.

When the valve is opened, the water quirts from the nozele with a force which is truly amazing, a force which is furly amazing, a force with the woll of the results of the re

Comee! Sluicee-rob comee! And Rike now saw four or five strange men coming up the rayine.

They had guns in their hands, and that they meant to break open and plunder the office was clear enough to Rike. He furthermore knew they would not hesitate to murder him, and would probably do so to shield themselves from further identification.

Escape was impossible, unless he and chinaman could climb a well-nigh perpendicular gravel-bank, three or four hundred feet high.

'I knew I was caught like a mouse in a trap,' Rike afterwards said, in his account of the affair. 'That iron pipe was too big round to shin up. I thought at first that I could get the carbines and pop at them from behind the office as they came up the gulch.

When I found that the office locked, I knew that the only weapon of defence I had was the dugong' (water-gun). 'And I hadn't any too much time, either, for the rascals were coming at the top of their speed.

'When they saw me turning the nozzle, they yelled at me savagely, and swore most fearful oaths. 'Get you little sneaking coyote!' they shouted. 'Two of them at once took aim and fired. Their guns were charged with buckahot. It pattered all about me.

When they aw me crouching there, they made rush. I think the man ahead was a digger Indian. He had a big knife in his hand.

'When he was within a hundred feet, I turned the jet upon him. At first, it went over him,—squizz! But I levelled it. Then it took him right aquare in the stomach. It just lifted him,—took him off his feet as if he'd been made of feathers! That big lnife

"But I'd no time to give him more than one aquirt, for two of them were running to the right of me, close up to the gravel-bank. They were within fifty feet of the spot where I stood when I jerked the nozale round. One of them fired his revolver. The ball came dreadfully close to my head! I fairly felt it; but he didn't get a chance to five another.

Salmon fishing has been ennobled, as a specific gravity.

But, though an engine of such power, the nozale, or water-gun is easily managed; and an intelligent boy of four-teem, like Rike, is able to tend it, and direct the jet wherever it is necessary, against the gravel bluff.

Hyde's Guloh was, at the time of which a my witing, a narrow ravine, made in part by the water-gun itself. On each side there were gravel-banks three or four hundred feet high. The ravine opened at the west into a tributary of, I think, the Stanislans River; but shut in at its upper end, was closed by almost perpendicular bluffs, over which the great water pipe, was bent, and brought down to the bottom of the ravine.

A few small buildings had been erected by the mining company near the upper end of the ravine, in which to keep the tools; and a strong structure, called the 'office," was used for the temporary storage of mercury and the gold prior to its being sent to San Francisco.

"Dear H.: The Marquis will be at my office in a few minutes. If you wish to see him, come down the great bank of gravel, to shake and loosen it, so that the water jet would work with better effect.

But on the afternoon following the blast, and that on which occurred a brave exploit of Rike's, the lad was tending the jet with no companions but three Chisamen who were employed to watch the spouls, or "long Toma," to be keep them from elogging, etc.

Nothing was heard in the gulch but the wits and splashing of water, as Rike turned the nowle up and down on the great eracked and fissured walls of gravel. Away down the gorge, the dumpy figures of the Chinese could be seen moving lazily about, here and there.

But as Rike happened to look in that direction, he saw an unusual commotion among them. First, they ran a few steps, then shood huddled together, looking down in the ravine. A moment, after, one of them, named, Cheng Sai, turned and ran at the top of his speed towards Rike, the other two flee-ing across the gulch to where some steps and a long ladder led up the face of the bluff.

'What's the matter now, Chengy!' Rike called out to him.

'Ghi-wee Tr-huntasi' cried the Celestial, relapsing in his terror, into his native tongue.

'None of that outlandish jabber!' exclaimed Rike. 'Talkee English-right smart, too.'

Thus adjured, Cheng cried out, 'Sluicee rob! Plentee man! Gold takee!'

Thus adjured, Cheng cried out, 'Sluicee rob! Plentee man! Gold takee!'

This broken jargon Rike readily understood to mean that a gang of sluice robbers had made a raid on the spouts below, and were coming up the gulch, scraping out the gold and quick-ailver from the grooves.

Ruppore of such a gang had previously been current, though, as yet, the ruffians had not been seen in what vicinity.

Shutting off the water-jet, Rike ran to the 'office,' where several loaded carbines were usually kept. But the office was locked. The foreman, who had the key, was with the rest of the men. Even while Rike was trying the door, Cheng cried.

Medical.

Nearly every person that has taken any preparation of Cod-Liver-Oil, knows how very liable it is to disagree with them after a time; this is mainly due to the inability of the stomach (weakened by disease) to digest the full amount of the oil taken. To overcome this trouble we have added Panceratine to our Emulsion, which not only assists in digesting the oil, but is an acknowledged remedy of itself in the treatment of Consumption.

In taking Mattison's Pancreatic Emulsion of Cod-Liver Oil with Lacto-Phosphate of Lime, you receive the benefit of two of the best remedies known to science, in the treatment of any of the above diseases. for SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
