Cold Winter Coming.

FOXES DIG DEEP AND MUSKRAT HOUSE-WALLS ARE THICK.

The long headed old Adirondack men have agreed, says the Sun, that "finer weather never laid out o' doors than what we've been havin', but unless the signs fail, "we're goin' to get it right smart the other way," beginning very soon.

And here are some of the signs on which Adirondack folks rely when they are looking into the future of the weather.

The boys have had to dig deeper for foxes this fall than at any time for six years, and above all the fox holes of which report was made in the hotel horse shed at Grante had been found in the earth instead of the rocks, where they are usually found. The fox is "a right cunnin' critter," and he knows in some way when cold weather is to be expected, and digs a hole accordingly.

Then attention was called to the horses that came into the shed. Every one was sweating, although it was a cold if bright day.

"See the sweat," said Uncle Dan'l Higgins. "It's because every one of em has an unusually thick coat. Why, just rub your hand on any horse here and you'll find the hair as thick as on a bear's skin."

It is confidently asserted that a thick coat always grows on all domestic animals when a very cold winter is expected,

Another woodsman called attention to the old beaver meadows.

"The grass on Flae brook hasn't been so long in—well not since 87. I can show you stalks from six to six and a half feet long in what I cut for bedding." he said, "and that growth is noticed, they say, only in the kind of a year when the muskrats are likely to need a particularly warm home for the season."

The muskrat homes have not been attacked yet in the regular fall hunts, but one man, Bill McDougal of the Twin lake stream settlement, had "opened one for luck," and found the walls, he said, at least a quarter thicker than they were last year.

The old stand-by sign of the goose bone is hooted at by the woodsmen of this section, but two men who brought deer out of the woods on the last day of the season, and kill many partridges every fall, said that all kinds of game are dressed in unusually warm coats, as are the domestic animals.

The last sign to be mentioned was probably the most important because the most trustworthy of all. After listening to what the rest said, superintendent Talbot of the Hickley lumber mills went to an apple tree not far from the shed and took away a cocoon made there by some kind of a caterpillar and broke it open before the woodsmen.

Very few if any of the spectators were familiar with cocoons but Mr. Talbot who is a naturalist as well as an expert politician and a lumberman said the softness as well as the thickness of the material indicated the kind of weather to which the other signs pointed.

A Man's Woman.

[Mary B. O'Sullivan in December Donahue's.]

WANTED.—A wife, humble, handsome, accomplished, amiable, stylish, entertaining, a thorough housekeeper, finished cook, graduated seamstress, skilled nurse, a painstaking collector of masculine bric-a-brac, including tobacco ash, cigar stumps, old shoes, and other debris left over from the wedding; in addition to these trifling qualifications, she must possess a knowledge of the fine arts, be a sweet singer, brilliant instrumentalist, and have such exquisite mental mechanism as to enable her to analyze the subtle niceties of thought governing the varying moods of her would-be master. No proposition will be favorably received unless the applicant can pass a satisfactory examination on any or all points specified. She will also be given opportunities to exhibit her skill in speedy, scientific cold-soap fire-building. Apply in person to

BACHELOR, 1313 Washington St.,
Boston, Mass.

This is no imaginary advertisement; it is a veritable statement of what one retiring man hopes to find in his life partner, a frank outspoken summary of what he considers indispensable to happiness. He didn't say anything about what she might expect in return, beyond intimating that he would be willing to keep her in coal and kindling, let her have a new gown now and again, and give her ample opportunities for athletic development in bringing order out of his chaotic surroundings.

There was one point on which he was very firm, stern even, and that was, "No questions." He said he'd spend his money as he liked, come and go when he liked, stay out as late as he liked, and come home when, how or in what condition he liked, without putting in an excuse with his appearance. He gave his audience to understand that he could say sweet things if he wanted to, but wasn't going to depreciate their value by lavishing them. The melting mood came on in the glow of the fire kindled by her fair hands.

Among those who listened to this one man's wants was a woman, a timid, tearful, humble mortal, who didn't dare say anything; but some way her thoughts turned to a tombstone she had seen in a city cemetery. It was a rather pretentious slab, and across the top was blazoned a man's name, and down below, as if shrinking away even in marble, a woman's Christian name with the further inscription: "Wife of the above-mentioned." He wasn't dead at all (such men generally do survive), but he couldn't let her have even a tombstone to herself, so he put her away down in the corner and filled the public eye with his own personality. That was the end of a truly humble woman. Fortunately, Nemesis in the form of a second wife overtook that man, and let us hope it may in this other case, where so much is expected in return for "board and keep." It would be mighty amusing to go into detail on each requirement; but it couldn't be done in less space than 100 pages, so we must content ourselves in following up the first.

Now it sometimes happens that a woman who is all humility and deference before marriage, develops startling self-assertion immediately after, and the man who started out with the intention of addressing her as "You, there!" finds himself saying, "Ma'am," a month after the ceremony. He gives up every penny he earns, and gets his tobacco money doled out, carries coal, runs to the grocery, shakes the rugs, sifts the ashes, peels the potatoes, and crawls off to business with his erstwhile haughty spirit limper than his linen. When a half hour late on the home run, it is pitiful to contemplate his mental agony as he cudgels his brain for excuses, and finally concocts a fairy tale that very properly collapses under a scathing, "NOW, TOM, DON'T TELL ME!"

And he doesn't tell her—he just hooks his heels in the rung of the chair to brace himself, pulls himself together and takes it, registering a mental vow to knock down the first fellow who talks of humility as a fetching feature in woman, lovely woman.

At Half Mast.

[E. W. Frentz, in December Donahoe's.]

Men on the wharf were looking through their long glasses at the vessel coming in. Two of them spoke almost at the same time. "It is the Jessie Roberts," they said.

A little boy who had been looking too, started on a run up the wharf. He never stopped running till he broke, breathless, into a little house, low and weather-beaten, and banked with sea-weed, under the brow of the hill. "Mother! Mother"! he cried; "she's coming! she's coming,"! the Jessie's most in.'

The young woman, making bread, threw a faded shawl over her head and shoulders. She wiped her hands on her apron, and started with the boy.

A little crowd was already on the wharf—folk drawn together by the common bond of daily bread won from the deep waters, and the dearer ties of husbands, lovers, brothers, and fathers on board. Two of the owners were there. They saw their vessel back from the crafty sea and the stealthy fog. All her white sails were set and drawing. The sun of the clear winter morning shone on her clean decks. Ice in the riging gleamed like diamonds. She was deep in the water, an earnest of hundreds—perhaps thousands—of barrels of fish in her hold.

"I hope they've got a good fare this time," said a careworn woman. "We've got to pay something on our mortgage next week. I ain't had any new clo'se for a year."

The vessel fast grew bigger; and while those on the wharf watched, she came about. Then the light left every face. No one said a word—no one made a cry or a groan. The men pressed nearer the edge of the wharf, and the women, white-faced and shuddering, shrank back and drew together. Every eye was fixed on the vessel's main mast, where the stars and stripes flew at half mast. The topsail had hidden the flag until the vessel came about.

There they stood, waiting till the Jessie had been made fast. The woman from the house, pale and trembling, held her boy by the hand. To her came the captain with uncovered head. His blue eyes were wet with water that, though salt, was not of the sea. He tried to speak, but failed. The woman hid her face in her hands. The captain took the boy by the hand, and put his arm about the woman's waist and led them home.

"Why are you in such bad humor?"

"Because I met a fellow yesterday whom I treated very politely, and it has only just occurred to me that he has owed me £5 for several months."

She—If you married a girl in the hope that she would one day come into a fortune, wouldn't you feel guilty?

He—Not if she got the fortune.

For every man gone wrong there is always one woman who thinks the world was against him.

There is no woman who is not a little of a coquette, and no coquette who is not a good deal of a woman.

No man was yet thanked for taking a woman's part against a brutal husband. Police court judges know that.

Little Miss Freckles—If Susie Stuckup was as cross to me as she was to you, I'd get mad and not speak to her,

Little Miss Muggins—No, you wouldn't if you knew what I know.

"What?"

"She's going to have a birthday party, with two kinds of ice cream, and a whole lot of lady-fingers an' fruit cake,"

Vexed wife—There is no calamity that can befall a woman that I have not suffered!

Amiable husband—Wrong, my dear; now, you have never been a widow.

Vexed wife—I said a calamity, sir!

Satan (reflectively) I guess I have a pretty bad name on earth.

Lucifer—Why do you think so?

Satan—You remember that shade in the check suit who came this morning?

Lucifer—Yes.

Satan—Well, as soon as he got me alone he offered me a cigarette.

Hotel New Netherland.

FIFTH AVENUE, CENTRAL PARK AND 59th ST. NEW YORK.

The most elegant, the safest, the strongest and most complete hotel palace of the world.

On the European plan, with a grand restaurant, cafe and private saloons

Fresh air and pure water. Artificial ice and cold storage used exclusively.

Every parlor, bed-room, bath room and clothes closet scientifically ventilated, rendering it absolutely impossible for impure air to accumulate, thus making all rooms delightfully cool, even in the hottest weather, a feature unknown in other hotel construction.

All plumbing of the most modern description; every pipe or outlet being ventilated from the roof open plumbing and solid porcelain bath-tubs.

All Croton water, for drinking cooking and even bathing purposes, filtered by the celebrated Bahring system, which, unlike any other, removes all organic matter from the water which is held in suspension and physical solution, but at the same time thoroughly decolorizes and deodorizes the water during purification, thereby rendering it a product equal to the finest chemically distilled water, pure and yet sparkling, without the aid of chemicals in any form whatever.

All rooms of every description, even to clothes closets, are lighted by electricity, thus avoiding the vitiated air caused by gas and the danger of inhaling same.

The house is more thoroughly fire-proof than any other building ever constructed, no wood being used except for cabinet purposes.

Steam boilers outside of the building.

Remington Typewriters and operators furnished, Telephone in every room. Long distance telephone when desired. Individual safes for each guest in office.

One block from the Sixth Avenue Elevated railroad station. Fifth Avenue stages and Fifty-Ninth Street Crosstown cars pass the door.

BROADWAY AND THIRTY-EIGHTH STREET, NEW YORK.

House strictly first-class in all appointments, and in a most central and delightful location, easy of access to places of amusement and business, and one block from the Metropolitan Opera House, the Casino, the new Broadway Theatre and the new Empire Theatre.

The main feature of the Hotel is that it is absolutely fire-proof. The floor and roof beams are all of iron, and the filling between the beams and several floors, and at the roof is of fire-proof brick arched work laid in concrete.

The sanitary arrangements have been made a special feature by competent sanitary engineers.

The hotel is fitted with the most complete system of electric appliances ever devised to insure the safety of guests in any similar establishment. Every room is connected by direct speaking tubes with the office, and guests will be able to announce their wishes, or give orders to the office, ascertain the name and business of callers, etc., without having to call on bell-boys; or, when a guest desires to leave his room, by notifying the office, the room can be connected with a system of alarms, so that no one can enter it by the door, the window or fanlight, without the fact being announced in the office; also, fire alarm signal to every room and to the Metropolitan Fire Department.

The hotel contains 200 rooms, en suite and single, all heated by steam, and conducted on the European plan, with a restaurant, cafe and salons of peculiar excellence.

Special arrangements made to families.
