Agreement Between British and Persian Governments Was for Purpose of Developing Latter Country—What it Provides for.

London, June 30.—The agreement between the British and Persian governments was signed at Teheran, August 9, 1919. The preamble states that the agreement is made "in virtue of the close ties of friendship which have existed between the two governments in the past, and because it is essential that these ties should be maintained and that the progress and security of Persia should be promoted to the utmost."

"1. The British Government reaffirms, in the most categorical manner, the undertakings which it has repeatedly given in the past to respect absolutely the independence and integrity of Persia.

"2. The British Government will supply, at the cost of the Persian Government, the services of whatever expert advisers may, after consultation between the two governments, be considered necessary for the several departments of the Persian administration. These advisers shall be engaged on a temporary basis, and shall be paid the same as would be paid to the corresponding officials of the Persian Government and the advisers.

"3. The British Government will supply, at the cost of the Persian Government, such officers and such munitions and equipment of modern type as may be adjudged necessary by a joint commission of military experts, British and Persian, which shall assemble forthwith for the purpose of estimating the needs of Persia in respect of the formation of a uniform force which the Persian Government proposes to establish and maintain and preservation of order in the country and on its frontiers.

"4. For the purpose of financing the reforms indicated in clauses 3 and 4 of this agreement, the British Government offer to provide or arrange a substantial loan for the Persian Government, for which adequate security shall be sought by the two governments in consultation with the experts sought by the two governments in respect of customs or other sources of income at the disposal of the Persian Government. Pending the completion of negotiations for such a loan the British Government will supply on account of it such funds as may be necessary for financing the said reforms.

"5. The British Government fully recognizing the urgent need which exists for the improvement of communications in Persia, with a view both to the extension of trade and the prevention of famine, are prepared to cooperate with the Persian Government in the encouragement of Anglo-Persian enterprise in this direction both by means of railway construction and other forms of transport, subject always to the examination of her problems by experts and to agreement between the two governments as to the particular projects which may be most necessary, practicable, and profitable.

"6. The two governments agree to the appointment forthwith of a joint committee of experts for the examination and revision of the existing customs tariff with a view to its reconstruction on a basis calculated to accord with the legitimate interests of the country and to promote its prosperity.

"7. Appended to the agreement was a contract between the two governments regarding the loan. This was for two million pounds sterling to be paid to the Persian Government as the latter indicated after the British financial adviser provided for in the agreement had taken up his duties at Teheran. The interest was named at 7 per cent up to March 20, 1921, and thereafter Persia was to pay monthly instalments with a view to liquidating the debt in twenty years. The Persian Government agreed to assign the revenue from customs receipts, after deducting the cost of administration, as security for repayment of the loan.

"8. And She With His Dogh. "Brown married his cook, didn't he?" "Yes." "Was it a love match?" "Oh, yes. You see he fell in love with her salads."

It Has that deliciously fresh and fragrant flavor, so uncommon in "Just ordinary teas"
