Message Sent from Washington to Fort Myer and Back at Rate of 120,000 Words an Hour-Wireless Telegraphy a Success.

Washington, April 19- Rudyard Kipling's White Man's Burden was shifted from the war department to Fort Myer and back again today at the rate of 120,000 words per hour. This gratifying performance occurred in the course an experiment in sine wave telegraphy. A machine, operating like a typewriter, was used to punch holes in a narrow strip of paper similar to that used in en ordinary stock ticker and fed into the sender, which transmits the message in dots and dashes of the Morse system over a wire to Fort Myer and by the ground return system to the receiver at the depart-ment, which printed them on a message ment, which printed them on a message blank ready to be delivered. These dots and dashes are easily de-cipherable, and Lieutenant Colonel Squier, who had charge of the experiment, teld me that he was of the opinion that a child, after three or four days'

this means.

The record made today is below that obtained some time ago, when a message was sent by the sine wave system at more than three thousand words per minute. Colonel Squier called my at tention to a report from England that a Garman there had sent about sixty thousand words an hour, which is rethousand words an hour, which is regarded as a very low rate.

and a sounder are also at the receiving station. These two ins ruments are exactly the same as are in use in the ordinary telegraph office. The message is carried over the wire only to such point in midsir as it is necessary to deliver a message, which will produce without fall sound waves that will not meet with interruption between the points of sending and receiving. At the tip of the vertical wire is a brass sphere, and from this the sound waves go out in every direction, unless protected by shields, which will compel the message to go out like rays from a searchlight.

The receiver intended to take a mersage is tuned to the same point of synchronism fathem and interruptions for message. In this way the messages are kept from being intercepted.
