THE WEST AND THE TARIFF

Farmers Are Purely Selfish in Asking for Free Trade

NO THOUGHT OF OTHERS

Carelessness in Not Housing Machinery Costs Them Large Sums—Sir Wilfrid Laurier Puts Quietus on Demand for Abolition of Duties.

(From Telegraph Man on Tour.)
Moscow, Aug. 9.—The people in the West declare themselves to be the most inveterate Free Traders. The Grain Growers Association nearly everywhere present long memorials praying that the tariff may be wiped out root and branch; but if so radical a departure cannot be made at one sweep, that at least that portion in which affects them, viz., the duty on agricultural implements, shall be removed. This sort of Free Trade doctrine is not peculiar to the West; it has been heard before in other sections of the country.

The west wants a lower tariff; there is no doubt about that; and in this the west is purely selfish, as becomes the spoiled child of a nation. It has, as yet, no particular demand for a protective tariff. When manufacturers begin to spring up, the desire for free trade will be less. We did not hear so much of it in Winnipeg, which is becoming a considerable importance as a manufacturing centre.

The implements required by the average farmer with a small farm are as follows: Plow, $180; drill, $140; mower, $82; reaper, $100; disc, $45; harrow, $30; fenders, $40; pickler, $16. Wagons cost from $110 to $125. A pickler is an apparatus for removing dirt from the grain, a solution of formalin or bluestone being used. There are other items in addition to the above, the whole outfit amounting to over $1,300. The duty runs from 17 to 40 per cent, the latter being an outside figure, mainly only on belting and repairs. An average figure would probably be not more than 25 per cent. We may put down what they pay in duty, then, at $300, in round numbers.

The average life of farming machinery in this country is not over seven years. With good care, it should last from twelve to fourteen. So that it may be seen that it is not the pinch of poverty that is causing this outcry about the tariff, for by exercising ordinary care such as the average farmer in the east displays, they could save considerably more than the amount paid in duty.

The average life of farming machinery in this country is not over seven years. With good care, it should last from twelve to fourteen. So that it may be seen that it is not the pinch of poverty that is causing this outcry about the tariff, for by exercising ordinary care such as the average farmer in the east displays, they could save considerably more than the amount paid in duty.

Now, without entering into a discussion of the question of free trade—which, judging from the replies given by the premier to the grain growers, is still in the realm of speculation only, though a consummation of it would be an outside possibility, it may be observed that the farmer in this country suffers a loss on his farming machinery which is not due to the tariff nor to anything else but his own carelessness. However you go you will find that this valuable machinery out in the middle of the fields or in the sloughs, exposed to every wind that blows and every rain that falls. An extensive dealer in agricultural machinery has told me that the implements would last twice as long as they do if they were given proper treatment, and looked after with care.

It might be thought that, while waiting for the removal of this tariff, which is expected to effect so much for him, the farmer might exercise some care over what costs him so much.

The Beauties of Protection.
Some of the facts presented show that the farmers have made a very thorough study of the question as we should expect so intelligent a class of men to do. The International Harvester Company now works in both Chicago and Hamilton (Ont.). The distance and freight rates from Chicago to Idaho and from Hamilton to Saskatchewan are about the same. Yet, a maverick sells in Idaho for $48 and Saskatchewan for $65. The Massey-Harris sander sells in England for $147.24, and in the Canadian west for $170 to $180. Similarly, they say, the Dominion Iron & Steel Company is selling steel rails in the Punjab for $24 per ton, and in Canada for $29.

In reply to their demands and allegations, Sir Wilfrid Laurier points out that the government has already reduced the tariff materially. There has been a reduction made on 481 articles. Eighty, including some articles much used by farmers such as binder twine, fencing and corn, have been placed on the free list. The tariff has been revised in 1897 and again in 1907. "Aha," they say, "that means that it will not be revised again until another ten year interval, or in 1917, and we cannot wait that long."

A word of more or less finality was said on this matter at the Moosejaw meeting by Mr. McDonald, with, of course, the knowledge of the premier, who afterwards endorsed Mr. McDonald's presentation of the government attitude. It was done after deliberation and was probably recognized as necessary before the tour proceeded any further.

The further west we have gone, the more pronounced the demands of the agriculturists for free trade have become; and had not a definite answer of some kind been made to them, it would not have been out of keeping with the character of the west to have imagined that the whole thing had been settled in accordance with the tone of their addresses. They must see from the Moosejaw address that the progress towards free trade will have to be very gradual; that while the eyes of the government and the Liberal party will continue to be fixed on that goal, they will not press so swiftly towards it as some of the more ardent might desire.

The man in the meeting at Moosejaw who called out at the conclusion of one of Mr. McDonald's sentences—"That's queer free trade!" the latter turned and said emphatically: "A tariff is the easiest way in which people can contribute to the government for carrying on the affairs of the country. It is the easiest way in which each part of the country can contribute towards carrying on the affairs of the whole. Your Hudson Bay Railway and all the other great works which the west needs, can be financed only by a tariff—a moderate tariff—one which does not bear unduly on any section of the country. Where it does bear unduly, Sir Wilfrid Laurier may be trusted to see that the grievance is remedied."

This is definite enough. The government has no immediate intention of making any radical changes in the direction of a lower tariff, having done much in that direction already, although, no doubt its face will be set in that direction.

When the premier arose, he endorsed what the member for Pictou had said, remarking that on the tariff the case had been so completely stated that there was not much left for him to say on the question. He hoped the government could give them more free trade when the time came, but the time was not yet. The premier is inclined to impress upon his constituents that the tariff reductions already made, and the British preference, constitute a very considerable measure of free trade.

KING GEORGE AT HOME AMONG THE BLUEJACKETS

BLUEJACKET AS VALET TO HIS MAJESTY

London, Aug. 12.—No one who visited the fleets at Torbay when King George was inspecting them last week could help being struck with the personal note, and for two reasons. First of all, the dominion of the personality of George V., and alongside of this, as its complement, the personality of the crews of the ships. King George was among his old shipmates—in a vast number of cases, his old messmates. Even in some instances the men he had come to inspect had been and still are, so far as the association between a king and a commoner can go, his "raggies." The situation was unique.

When King George went to sea as a midshipman and as a lieutenant doubtless the higher powers decided who his messmates should be. But in a gunroom, and to some extent in a wardroom, community of interests makes for a democratic state of affairs. It was in the gunroom that King George won popularity by his straightforwardness, his outspokenness and his keen sense of humor. There can be no doubt that, though he knows how to do royal things in royal way, he still finds himself thoroughly at home among those who were his comrades afloat, and he and they thoroughly enjoyed the visit with its revivification of old memories.

BRUTAL MURDER IN SYDNEY, N. S.

Detective in Search of Restelli, Italian Murderer, Slain in Street

BELONGED TO LYNN

Witnesses Tell of Seeing Five Men Cross the Street to Where Griffin's Body Was Found, and Soon After Heard a Terrific Yelling.

Sydney, N. S., Aug. 16.—It looks as if E. J. Griffin, who has been in Sydney for several days from Quincy (Mass.), presumably as a detective looking for Restelli, the Italian, has been murdered. His body was found in an alleyway this morning with his throat cut so deeply that Dr. Johnston, who examined it, says that the wound could not have been self-inflicted. An inquest was begun by the coroner to-night, which was adjourned till tomorrow night.

John Young and Mrs. Christina McGowan both told of terrible screams in the early morning hours while they were in their homes near the place where the body was found.

Dr. Johnston says a man might be able to cut himself in this case, but would have to exercise extraordinary strength. The windpipe and all the lung arteries had been completely severed. It was remarkable that so deep a gash could be made without extending to greater length.

Mrs. McGowan swore that about 3 o'clock she saw five men cross the street towards the Esplanade, where the body was found. Five minutes later she heard dreadful yelling. The noise resembled that of men choking one another.

Griffin had been in Sydney about three weeks, and was known to the police as a detective from Quincy (Mass.), engaged in connection with the Restelli double murder case.

The last seen of Griffin by the police was at midnight. The body was found this morning by workmen engaged moving a building at the esplanade. The man was lying on the ground on his face. The razor was lying in a pool of blood. The body was identified by a Boston man as that of Griffin.

Griffin was within an inch or two of six feet, heavily built and weighed, apparently, close to 200 pounds. His collar was celluloid, but the color of his hair cannot now be distinguished so thoroughly as it soaked in the blood which poured from the wound in his throat and saturated his clothing to the waist.

Formerly Lived in Lynn.
Boston, Aug. 16.—(Special)—The slough found death with his throat cut, in Sydney (N. S.), today, is supposed to be Edward J. Griffin, formerly of Lynn.

James M. Coughlan, proprietor of a Lynn lodging house, states that Griffin lived at his house in 1909. Coughlan is of the opinion that Griffin went from Lynn to Calais (Me.) Griffin told Coughlan that the former worked as a detective and had been employed on newspapers in the Maritime Provinces. The last time Coughlan saw Griffin was in April last. About a month ago Coughlan received a letter from Griffin who was then in Calais (Me.) According to Coughlan, Griffin was about 34 years of age, light complexioned, weighed about 200 pounds and was six feet tall.

DR. CRIPPEN'S LETTER TO HALIFAX MAN

Offered to Send Him Special Treatment for Ear Trouble on Receipt of $3—Letter, it is Thought, Was Written by Miss Le Neve.

Tuesday, Aug. 16.
The Telegraph yesterday received a copy of a letter that was written by Dr. H. H. Crippen, the alleged murderer, to a gentleman in Halifax. The letter was written a few days before Crippen left London, and referred to some treatment for ear trouble which the Halifax man had written him about. Dr. Crippen requested the gentleman to forward him the sum of $3, and in return he would send him his special treatment. The letter was written presumably by Miss Le Neve, and was signed H. H. Crippen, who represented himself as a specialist.

The letter is as follows:

Dear Sir,—I recently had the pleasure of sending you a copy of the "Otological Gazette," together with an Analytical Form, at the same time, requesting you to return the latter filled in, when I would furnish you with my opinion on your case, free of all expense.

Up to the present time, however, I have not had your reply, and may I again bring before your notice this unexampled opportunity whereby you can learn your exact condition and chance of cure. If you are suffering from deafness or noises in the ears, your complaint cannot, so to speak, stand still and it must either get better or worse—one or the other is bound to happen, and it is practically a certainty that your condition cannot ameliorate without attention of some kind.

Since writing you, I have received a most excellent report from Mr. R. Holmes, 88 South Street, Totnes, Devon, who writes me as follows:
"I cannot speak too highly of your treatment and I am 66 years of age and for years have been suffering from headache, deafness and lousiness, so much so that I despair of ever getting cured, and I could not hear anything even close to, not even church bells, but after using your treatment for three weeks I am completely cured and can now hear as well as ever."

Most strongly do I urge you, therefore, to fill in the enclosed Analytical Form and return it to me without delay, when I will at once send you my opinion on your case. Remember that this costs you nothing at all and places you under no obligation of any kind. I would note for your guidance that the cost of the necessary outfit (including appliances, accessories and remedies especially chosen for the purpose of curing the particular conditions from

FEW COUNTERFEIT COINS IN CANADA

Report That Much Is in Circulation Denied by Chief of Dominion Police.

Ottawa, Aug. 16.—There is a general report that counterfeit quarters and half dollars are in circulation throughout Canada. The banks have heard it and the finance department at Ottawa has been very extensively informed of the fact. The truth is the Canadian currency was never before so clean as today and never were bogus coins and bills so scarce.

The alarm seems to have been occasioned by a change which was made in the coins of Canada on the first day of January, 1908, and which has apparently not been discovered till now. Assuming that the surface of a coin could have a top, and that the crown on the head of the monarch was at the top, the small crown on the reverse side of each quarter and half, made prior to 1908, would be at the bottom, just opposite the monarch's neck. When coinage was commenced at Ottawa this was changed and on all coins now the crown is the top on both the obverse and reverse.

Colonel Sherwood, chief of the Dominion police, says there has been no serious circulation of counterfeit in Canada for some years, in fact not since the Croziers, father and son, of Oakville, were taken and sentenced in 1908.

BOARDING HOUSE ROMANCE ENDS IN GIRL WEDDING A BARON

Villa Justina, Roberbad, Austria. Miss Carmichael is the daughter of James R. Carmichael, a lawyer, who died fifteen years ago.

The young couple appeared at the County Clerk's office a few minutes before the closing hour and asked for a license. Miss Carmichael said that she was twenty-seven years old and was employed as a manager of the stenographic department of the Du Pont Powder Company, of No. 90 West street. Baron von Urban gave his age as twenty-five, and said that he was the son of Baron Charles von Urban, who was a field marshal in the Austrian army at the time of his death, six years ago.

Upon receiving the license the couple made anxious inquiries as to whether there was any one in the City Hall who could perform a marriage at once. Alderman McCann offered this service.

After the ceremony had been performed the couple hurried away and left for a honeymoon trip to Niagara Falls and the West.
