Under-Currents By The Duchess

"Stow all that!" says she coarsely, "and pull yourself together, and be a man again. You've money enough to send him back to where he came from, and you've got to do it. Well, well, well!" catching at the word of hope with feverish impatience.

"Nothing," says she shortly.

"But if I pay him now," says the old man, again grasping her sleeve, "he'll come again, and again, until I'm begging!"

"Ay, he'll do that," grimly: "he looks like that."

"He won't leave me with a penny, he'll stick to me, he'll suck me dry!" almost screams the wretched miser.

"Ay, ay; that'll be true."

"When I'm beggared, you'll be beggared too," says he, still in a piercing tone, "with my miserable sense of comfort in the thought."

"I've been thinking of that. He's a leech, that Sedley. You're right when you say he'll stick to you; now he's found his way here, he'll find it again. You've had a long riddance of him, but I'm thinking you'll see a good deal of him from this day out."

"I won't—I swear it!" says he, the crown look dying at once from his face; "I take means to rid myself once for all of—"

"Ay—but how? Dysart—but how?" says she, leaning forward and thrusting her lean avaricious face into his.

"There's but one way to end this trouble for ever and aye. No one knows of his coming here—I asked him that—no one knows his errand—I asked him that too; he came here across the hills from Granthorn without speaking to him or making himself known—that if he—should never go back again?"

"Kill him!" says she, with a low hiss and breath, "kill him, if you're a man at all!"

"Tut, woman!" says he scornfully, putting her aside with a light gesture and walking with a new air of determination towards the house.

CHAPTER L.

Diseases desperate grown, By desperate appliance are relieved, Or not at all.

It is characteristic of the iron nature of the man—that rose above all petty cringings to a miserly fear—that as he enters the presence of the one creature whom on earth he dreads he does so with a calm visage and one expressionless. His step is slow, methodical as usual; his face, grey in its pallor, a very mask. His brilliant eyes alone betray the keen, life that still lingers in the gaunt old frame, and they look through the unwelcome visitor with an unblinking gaze.

"You!" he says softly, nay smiling, by extending a graceful hand with a good deal of languid indifference.

"Just that," says Sedley, in a tone so low and common as to contrast painfully with the polished accent that had gone before. "Years since we met, mate."

"Many," says Mr. Dysart, staking carefully into a rickety old chair near him, Sedley being in possession of his rightful throne; "and yet it seems like yesterday—that we parted."

"Take it like a downy nest you've been lyin' in," says the large, coarse-looking man in the arm-chair, "with a distinctly aggrieved air. He stretches out his long legs, sticks his hands into his trousers' pockets, and deliberately spits into the empty grate. "And why? There's the injustice of it. You're as much right to this place as I have, when all's told. And if I can't get my share—"

"Sh—" breathes Mr. Dysart softly, hitting one hand. "Why shout, my dear fellow? You call to think how it hurts my head. And—well, so you have come back? Pining for the old country, eh? Tired of the beautiful climate out there? One hears so much of the home-sickness, I can understand, really, that—"

"I got regular tired to turn pence into shillings," interrupts the other brusquely, "without a decent result. After a while there ceased to be any thing to experiment on, so I came back."

"So I see," always with that delicate smile upon his thin lips. "And for what purpose?"

"To look you up," doggedly. "To see whether you were in the yave or out of it."

"I'm out of it," says Dysart sweetly.

"So I see; and jolly glad to see it. Your case would have been of little use to me, and I might have had trouble proving my case with your son."

"You might have trouble proving it even with me," says Dysart smiling.

TODAY'S EVENTS.

Centenary of the birth of Jacques Offenbach, the celebrated composer of comic operas.

According to official proclamation the legislative elections throughout the Armenian republic are to begin to-day and continue until Monday.

The campaign for the New Jersey governorship is expected to be formally launched to-day at the meeting of the State League of Republican Clubs at Trenton.

There were 43 acclamations in 81 constituencies in Quebec nominations.

James Hanford, Gordon Head, B.C., died on the eve of his golden wedding.

Ben Turpin, the famous cross-eyed comedian, tells that on one occasion he approached two small Liverpool boys, and asked one of them to carry his bag to the station.

"Which one, mister?" piped both urohins in chorus.

"You," said Ben.

"But which one?"

"You," patiently explained the funny man. There was a pause. Then one of the small boys mustered up courage and said:

"Please, mister, if you'll close one eye then maybe we can tell which of us you are talking to."

THE POLICE FORCE OF THE BODY

DAY and night—without ceasing—a struggle is going on in your body between the germs of disease and the white blood corpuscles—the police force of the human body.

If this police force weakens, disease germs gain a foothold—sickness follows.

Constipation is the most common and dangerous way of corrupting the human police force. Food waste remains too long in the intestines—decays—poisons the blood—and opens the way for attack by the germs that cause tuberculosis, diphtheria, pneumonia and a multitude of other ills.

The culpable habit of using salts, pills, mineral waters, castor oil, etc., to force the bowels to move, makes this condition even worse, as constipation returns almost immediately.

Nujol is entirely different from drugs as it does not force or irritate the bowels.

Nujol prevents stagnation by softening the food waste and encouraging the intestinal muscles to act naturally, thus removing the cause of constipation and self-poisoning. It is absolutely harmless and pleasant. Nujol helps Nature establish easy, thorough bowel evacuation at regular intervals—the healthiest habit in the world.

Get a bottle of Nujol from your druggist today and keep your police force on the job.

Warning: Nujol is sold in sealed bottles bearing the Nujol Trade Mark. All druggists insist on Nujol. You may suffer from substitutes.

TO ALL WOMEN WHO ARE ILL

This Woman Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Her Personal Experience.

McLean, Neb.—"I want to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all women who suffer from any functional disturbance, as it has done me more good than all the doctor's medicine. Since taking it I have a fine healthy baby girl and have gained in health and strength. My husband and I both praise your medicine to all suffering women."—Mrs. JOHN KOPPELMANN, R. No. 1, McLean, Nebraska.

This famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, has been restoring women of America to health for more than forty years and it will well pay any woman who suffers from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, backache, headaches, nervousness or "the blues" to give this successful remedy a trial.

For special suggestions in regard to your ailment write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of its long experience is at your service.
