The following address, by Professor Campbell, was delivered before the Convocation of McGill College, held 5th May, 1859, to the Graduates who received the degrees of Doctor of Medicine and Surgery. It has been considered advisable to append it to the general circular of the Medical Faculty, because the excellent remarks it contains are not only particularly appropriate, as being essentially within the scope of an annual announcement, but convey valuable advice upon the important subjects of preliminary education and of professional deportment.
