Monkey Hunt In the Jungles of

SEE THESE AN EXCITING SPORT.

Our most exciting sport at the Nam-ting camp was hunting monkeys. Every morning we heard querulous notes, sounding much like the squealing of very young puppies. which were followed by long-drawn siren wails. When the shrill notes had reached their highest pitch they would sink into low, full ones exedingly musical. We were inspecting a line of traps placed along a trail which led up a valley to a wide plateau when the querulous squealing abruptly ceased good lot We moved on, alert and tense. The trees stretched upward a full one hundred and fifty feet, their tops spread out in a leafy roof. In the topmost branches of one we could just discern a dozen balls of yellow fur from which proceeded discordan wails. It was a long range for a shot-gun but the rifles were all in camp. I fired a charge of "BB's" at the lowof the armies had been beaten. The fifth had been practically routed. Horne's army had been beaten back but never broken. But despite the reverses, the line still held and the fifth and despite the line still held and the still held and the

We tossed him into the dry creekbed and dashed up the hill where the branches were still swaying as the branches were still swaying as the monkeys traveled through the tree-tops. They had a long start and it was a hopeless chase. In ten minutes they had disappeared and we turned back to find the dead animal. It was a young male, and I knew at once that it was a gibbon (Hylobates), for its long arms, round head, and tailless body were unmistakable; but in every species with which I was familiar the male was black. This one was yellow and we knew it to be a prize.
