KLONDIKE NUGGET.

From Friday's Daily.

REAPING THE WHIRLWIND.

The declaration made by the government of Canada respecting the policy of the White Pass railroad toward this territory supports in every particular the position taken by the Nugget...

The rates which the company has charged have been arbitrarily laid down without authorization or approval from the government...

There can be no doubt as to the completeness of the victory which has been achieved. The day of the White Pass railroad as the Yukon dictator has passed and gone.

The total membership of the Hoo-Hoo is limited to 9999, and the initiation fee is $9.99, while the annual dues are 99 cents.

Last year the rules regarding the time for the annual meeting were not observed, partly because the fifth day of the month fell on Sunday...

The initiation ceremonies of the Hoo-Hoo are called "consecrations" and that they are interesting is proved by the large attendance they attract.

Among the entertainments to be provided at this annual are the public functions of the Ostrian Cloister, embalment and cremation of ex-snarks, and the usual "Session on the Roof" and the "Carlo Gardens."

Notice. The licensed victuallers of Dawson will hold a meeting on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Exchange saloon.

J. P. McLENNAN. 233 FRONT STREET. The fact that the secret organization which is to blow the Yukon government into smithereens is known as the "Order of the Midnight Sun," makes the thing look rather Stroller's Column.

It all depends on how people are educated. Some men go nearly through life without knowing anything about holdups...

Speaking of incongruities, the following statement in print caught the eye of the Stroller a few evenings since: "Colonel Macgregor came to the Klondike with the rush."

There is one question which has been bothering the Stroller ever since he arrived in the country where mountain sheep are seen. Every mountain sheep seen in the meat markets of this country have rings extending to the tips of their horns.

"QUIT SIMPERIN' AND GIMME AN OYSTER STEW."

Each ring indicates one year of age, and the question that the Stroller would like to have answered is: Where do the rings go after the horns are filled?

Rings grow on the horns of cattle the same as on those of sheep, but cattle being usually indigenous to countries where corn is grown, there is no trouble in providing for a continuation of the rings, as a corn cob stuck on the end of the horn gives the man's life, it all depending on the length of the cob.

In North Carolina it is not unusual to see a man drive in from his perpendicular farm with the family milch cows yoked to a wagon—whose rings have covered their horns and probably three or four inches of alone at the time but he was at the cash drawer counting up the receipts of the day.

Hearing the door swing the restauranter looked up and beheld before him the man with the back handkerchief covering a portion of his face.

"Oh, mister! Please don't shoot, here is all the money in the house, take it and welcome. I am sorry there is not more, but please, kind sir, take what there is."

"To hell with 'yer an' yer money," said the hot tomale man, "quit yer corn cobs placed on the tips of the horns. Mountain sheep may be mighty fine eating, so may henas; but every time the Stroller sees one of them in a market or restaurant he makes a mental note and the next time he feels an appetite for meat coming on him he buys either a can of corned beef or a sirloin of bologna; then he knows that he is eating either horse or dog.

An excited man, hatless, coatless, vestless and almost breathless, made a rush at the Stroller yesterday evening ing and seizing him by the arm started violently along the street saying: "Hurry, for there is not a second to lose."

"But I do not care for a drink of water," said the Stroller.

"For God's sake, hurry!" said the excited man, "stinking his finger nails at the gooseflesh of the Stroller's arm, and the next half block was overed at a Maud S. gait."

Thoughts of being kidnapped and held for ransom flashed through the Stroller's mind and he shivered and shook with a terrible dread when he effected that no one would put up a copper towards securing his release.

The Stroller would be pleased to help the Gold Run people secure their postoffice if he only knew how to go about it...

Have you tried calling a citizens meeting? If not you might try it. Of course, but little good ever results from such gatherings...

But say! Even if you had a post-office, your mail would have to be sent out from Dawson and how could that be done when there is no mail coming here?

The country Mr. Elliott describes as extremely rich. Between the two forks of the river there is a dome from which creeks descend in nearly all directions...

There have just been found in the historic castle of Wollegg, Wuertemberg, says a Berlin special in the New York Herald, the first maps that contain the name and geographical outlines of America.

They were discovered by Father Joseph Fischer, a priest and professor of geology at Feldkirch, the capital of the Austrian province of Vorarlberg.

German geographers consider the find the most important of its kind in modern times. For many years the maps were regarded as hopelessly missing. Nordenskjold's last book referred to them as legendary.
