The Catholic Summer School.

CLIFF HAVEN, July 5.

With an attendance in excess of the beginning days of former years, and the beautiful weather making for an auspicious setting, the twenty first annual session of the Catholic Summer School of America was formally opened on Sunday last at Cliff Haven. The religious opening occurred in the morning in the Chapel of Our Lady of the Lake, when at the 9:30 o'clock Mass, Rev. Dominic J. Hickey, LL.D., President, welcomed to the Summer School the guests in the comfortably fitted edifice and pitched his sermon in a tone well keeping with the environment of the School. Taking his text from the first Epistle of St. Peter as read in the Mass, Father Hickey spoke warmly and eloquently on prudence in reading and conversation.

Referring to the invention of the printing press and its widespread influence on the history of the world, the President told of the manifold benefits accruing from the employment of the press in the uprooting of evil, the exposing of corruption in high and low places, and the dissemination of knowledge and truth throughout the world. Father Hickey told of the medium of books in bringing truth, information and pleasure, and the illuminating the intellect and imagination. After defining the great advantages from the judicious employment of the results of printing, the preacher emphasized the counter effects resulting from the great mass of indiscriminate reading offered to those unable to sift the general product and to recognize suitable pabulum for the intellect. Here Father Hickey urged his hearers to exercise the greatest caution and discretion in the choice of mental nourishment for themselves and those under their charge.

In the evening the formal opening of the Summer School took place in the Auditorium, when the first 'Family Gathering' was held. Father Hickey was chairman, and by his well chosen and happy remarks in presenting the various numbers, did much to give to the occasion the spirit that has made such gatherings famous in former years. Father Hickey introduced as the first number on the program Dr. Camille W. Zickwer of Philadelphia, choir master and instructor in music at the Summer School. The accomplished pianist and composer played one of his own compositions, which was warmly received by an audience well acquainted with his work. Dr. Zickwer was called upon for several eulogies by his appreciative hearers. Dr. Clarence Smith of Montreal extolled the occasion with timely and well chosen remarks in keeping with the occasion. The next number was a vocal solo, Marshall's 'I Hear You Calling Me,' by Joseph J. Stubb, Commandant of the College Camp, and one of last year's quartet. The number was soundly applauded and the soloist again called before the audience. Then followed a charity address on reminiscences by Mrs. Margaret M. Mooney, one of the early settlers of the Summer School, and a member of the faculty of the State Normal School in Albany. The talk was in a warm and mellowed strain that won prompt and repeated appreciation throughout the auditorium. The Secretary, Charles Murray, then followed in an address enlivened with familiar incidents, the recital of which won ready response from his hearers. The evening's program closed with a timely and witty talk from Francis P. Cunnion of the Board of Trustees, and Commissioner of Education in New York City, whose introduction was followed by a welcome that evinced the esteem and popularity with which the speaker is regarded at Cliff Haven.

The unveiling of the Champlain monument which took place under the direction of the tri-centenary commission on Saturday, July 6, at Plattsburg with gala festivities, will recall to former Summer School guests the famous centenary celebration which formed the setting for the banner year in the history of the Summer School. Governor Dix of New York and Count De LaRoche were guests of honor, while the principal address was delivered by John Medges of New York City, following that of John A. Stewart of this State. There was a street parade in the morning and a dress review at the United States Military Reservation near Cliff Haven, followed by luncheon, which proceeded the formalities of unveiling. Following the festivities Governor Dix and his staff, together with the Monument Commission and the speakers of the occasion, were guests at an informal Summer School reception.

The lecture course opened Monday evening with the Rev. Dr. J. T.

Roche of the Church Extension Society of Toronto.

On that evening the lecturer had as his subject 'The Church in India,' which dealt with the progress of the Faith in that land from the time of St. Thomas and the early Christians through the Portuguese missionary enterprise of 1498 to the establishment of the hierarchy in 1866. The stirring zeal and eloquence of the speaker found ready response in the keen enthusiasm and interest of his audience, and as the initial lecture of the course the occasion was one of real inspiration. On Tuesday evening Dr. Roche was heard on 'The Church in China,' whose scope included the labors attributable to St. Bartholomew down to the missionary successors of modern times. On the evening of the Fourth of July the lecturer was heard in one of his best articles on 'The Church in Japan,' while on Friday evening Dr. Roche gave the concluding number of his series when he spoke on 'The Changing Orient,' dealing with the influence of the West and the present day opportunities for the spread of the Gospel, and ending one of the most interesting courses at Cliff Haven.

During the ensuing week the Rev. William Martin, S. T. L., of New York City, will deliver three morning lectures on 'Charles Dickens, the Novelist,' as follows: Monday, July 8, 'Dickens and the Development of the Novel'; Tuesday, 'The Power of Dickens'; Wednesday, 'The Power of Dickens.' Two morning lectures will also be delivered on Thursday and Friday by James A. Rooney, A. B., of Brooklyn, on 'The Original School of Manuscript Illumination,' and 'The Influence of the Irish Monks on the Art of Europe.' Two song recitals are to be given on Monday and Tuesday evenings respectively by Miss Veronica Govers of New Rochelle. The former evening will be given over to 'Irish Music, Ancient and Modern,' and Tuesday evening to 'Modern English Composers.' The lecturer for Thursday and Friday evenings of the coming week will be Patrick E. Callahan, A. M., LL.D., of Brooklyn, N. Y., who will speak on 'Heroic Men and Their Labors.' Subject of Thursday evening's lecture is to be 'Robert E. Taney,' while on Friday evening Dr. Callahan will speak on 'Early Catholic Missionaries of America.'

The College Camp along the Beach had more than two score young men within its quarters for the opening day. The number of reservations for those who have already applied for admission and whose arrival is expected within a few days, ensures the Camp one of the most successful years in its history. The athletic program will begin on Saturday with a baseball game and preliminary aquatic sports, together with contests on the tennis courts and golf links. The first social event of the season was held at the Champlain Club on Wednesday evening, when the officers entertained the guests of the Summer School at the first formal hop of the season.

CLIFF HAVEN, July 20.

The trial scene from the 'Merchant of Venice' was the vehicle chosen for the first production of the Cliff Haven Dramatic Company, which took place last Saturday evening. Following this number as a curtain raiser, there was a one act farce, 'His Last Meal,' with a record as a feature act on the New York stage. Miss Roselle Knott, late star of 'When Knighthood was in Flower,' was a very clever Portia, being the leading woman in the Shakespearean act, while the program was produced under the direction of George Lund. Hugh Jeffrey's portrayal of Shylock was a noteworthy bit of acting, while Miss Viola Knott, whose interpretation of the part of 'Ophelia' at the Shakespeare's Birthday production of 'Hamlet' in New York City last winter, was accorded high praise from the critics, made a decided hit in 'His Last Meal.'

With more than 350 guests at present at Cliff Haven, the third week at the Catholic Summer School began to take on the color of the mid-day season gayety, and the steady influx of guests is expected to soon reach the 1,000 mark of last year.

At the family gathering in the Auditorium on Sunday evening, the principal address was by Judge A. B. Reid of Pittsburg, a pioneer advocate and patron of the Summer School, who had only glowing words of praise for the work being accomplished at Cliff Haven. Other numbers of note were vocal solos by Miss Katherine Kent and Mrs. John J. McGray, and piano selections by Dr. Camille W. Zickwer and Miss Marguerite Thornton, the young daughter of School Commissioner Thornton of New York City.

At the High Mass on Sunday morning the celebrant and preacher was the Rev. Maurice F. Cost, a convert from the Anglican faith, of the Diocese of Philadelphia.

Father Cost took his text from the portion of the Gospel read in the Mass, and preached on the fruits of life. The preacher told his hearers that fruits were always looked for from earthly labors, and reminded them that true Christians always sought to look upon the things of this life from the viewpoint of God. Father Cost told also of the answer of the great philosopher, that he knew not of the power that made for the beauty of life, and added that the Christian religion supplied this power in the grace which it gave men to enable them to save their souls. He further told of the difference between Creation and Redemption, in that all things are created by the very word of God, while the work of redemption is accomplished only by the sufferings and trials, both on the part of Christ and those who are saved.

The initial dance of the season at the Jersey Club was held on Monday evening, and found great favor with the guests. On Wednesday evening the officers of the Champlain Club entertained the guests of the assembly with the usual formal hop of the week.

The morning lectures during the week were delivered by Hy. Zek, Ph.D., of the Walden High School of New York City, who gave a masterful development on the subject of 'The Evolution of Modern Germany.' Dr. Zek included in the scope of his series the glory of Germany in the 16th century, and her decline in the 17th century, to the position of the great empire in the council of the nations today.

On Monday and Tuesday evenings the lecturer was the Rev. George Carnana of Brooklyn, who delivered a series of two lectures on the Philippine Islands. The talks were illustrated with interesting stereoscopic slides that went far toward making the lectures a huge success, and added much to the interest of the series. On Thursday and Friday evenings piano recitals were given by Miss Blanche M. Pyren of Brooklyn, who accompanied her delightful lectures with piano accompaniment that comprised a number of well executed selections from the works of the great masters.

The morning lecturer for the ensuing week is Rev. Francis P. Donnelly, S. J., professor of rhetoric at the Jesuit Novitiate at St. Andrew on the Hudson, who will deliver a series on 'The Method of Motive in Teaching English Composition.' The evening lectures will be by Rev. E. P. Patrick, J. Healy, S. T. D., of Washington, D. C., who will deliver a series of talks on 'Asceticism and Early Monasticism.'

The first ministrations of the session is to be given on Thursday of the ensuing week in the Auditorium. As nearly 500 campers are already quartered in the College Camp, the event ought to be a big success, in line with the memorable efforts of other years. The affair is being arranged under the direction of Joseph J. Stubb, commandant at the popular encampment along the beach.

How Women Can Vote.

Though the Baltimore Convention on the subject of Woman Suffrage, it was the occasion of an instructive pronouncement on that interesting question. Wishful to improve the tamer hours in the intervals between billiard by interviewing celebrities, a reporter approached Mrs. Josephus Daniels, who shares in the popularity of her genial husband, the distinguished editor and political leader of North Carolina. Reluctant to be interviewed, she would have her eloquent partner 'do the talking for the family,' but when pressed for her views on woman suffrage she said she had none, as there was 'no self-aggressive movement nor any such organization in North Carolina,' but she added patriotically: 'While I do not think our women want the vote, I am sure they would not be wanting in action if voting became a duty.'

We are quite sure of it; and also that the women who busy themselves mainly with the distinctive duties and functions of womanhood are those who would vote most conscientiously and intelligently should the right of suffrage be accorded them. Meanwhile Mrs. Daniels has an anxiety to possess the freedom of the ballot box, for she feels that she suffers an disadvantage.

'You see,' she remarked; when encouraged by her husband to express herself, 'I don't want a vote. I have four boys to vote for me. Don't you think that raising four boys to vote wisely and well is patriotism enough for one woman? Surely; though there are signs who have done even better. We know one patriotic mother who has seven sons eager to vote for Taft, and an equally patriotic Democrat whose eight sons are ready and qualified to vote for Wilson. It is clear that such quiet, unobtrusive mothers exercise a far greater influence, as well as moral influence, than those women who are more concerned with possessing the privileges of manhood than with discharging the duties of womanhood. The time may arrive when good men will insist that women shall possess, nationally, the right to vote which they now exercise in many localities. Mrs. Daniels has shown them how they can assist in the interval more than the influence of a single ballot. They have in their power a system of multiplied plural voting to which no statesman will raise objection.—America.
