REMOVE TRADE RESTRICTIONS.

Since our last issue consternation has been thrown into the camp of Protectionists on the other side of the line by the practical secession of JAMES G. BLAINE, the U. S. Secretary of State, and heretofore regarded by the Tariff upholders as the high priest of their chosen idea. The McKinley Bill, which was to have been the embodiment of American Protection ideas, has been given the cold shoulder by Mr. BLAINE, and the erstwhile Protectionist chief is now found advocating reciprocal relations with neighboring nations with a zeal worthy of the most advanced Cobdenites. He proposes to admit free to the United States all the products of Central and South America, and claims that up to date the progress of trade with these countries has been restricted, hindered and limited to a most surprising degree. Verily, the day of political surprises on Tariff Reform is at hand when so great and sudden a change has come over the apostle of American Protection and it need not be unlooked for if other leading Protectionists—and some of them on this side of the 49th parallel—follow in his train.

Most of us who know anything about the inception of the present Canadian Tariff know perfectly well that the Conservative party, when in Opposition under the leadership of Sir JOHN MACDONALD, after his defeat in 1873, were bankrupt in policy and principles. It is also well known that on the trade question both Sir JOHN MACDONALD and Sir CHARLES TUPPER, his financial lieutenant, were committed by the statements of a lifetime to the policy of free trade. So pronounced were these gentlemen on this line that when it was thought a change from a 15 per cent. to a 17 1/2 per cent. Tariff was contemplated by the Reform Government, Sir CHARLES rose in his place in the House and inveighed against the contemplated scheme, alleging that such action would be the "entering of the thin end of Protection."

But there are no principles that bind politicians hungry for office, and when the financial depression of 1876 and 1877 was abroad in the land a cry arose that Protection would make the country rich by the upbuilding of local industries and the upraising of "tall chimneys,"—a change in the fiscal policy was wanted and a change must be had. Then it was that the politicians of expediency looked at the political weather-vane to see which way the wind was blowing, and in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, Sir JOHN and Sir CHARLES, the erstwhile champions of Free Trade, were changed into stalwart defenders of the N.P., promoters of the upbuilding of a Chinese wall of Protection, men with a new song in their mouth and a hope for office in their breast. We know the result. Caught by the specious pleas of the scheming politicians, and hoping that a change for the better might be effected were new rulers selected, the people in many instances swerved from their allegiance to sound trade principles, and when the returns from the polls were made on the 17th of September, 1878, the MACKENZIE Government had ceased to exist, and an Administration pledged to a Protective Tariff reigned in its stead.

The introduction of the N.P. in 1879 was claimed to be a means to an end. Every one who knows anything knows that Canada's most prosperous commercial career was during the days of Reciprocity, and it was openly stated, "If we cannot have reciprocity of products we must have Reciprocity of Tariffs"—the hope being indulged that if our neighbors could not come into Canada with their produce without passing over a wall of Protection here, they would have their eyes opened to the folly of keeping up a customs wall on their side of the line. That idea existed then, but whether it holds today is another question. Since the inception of the N.P., the bolstering of tottering industries has become a function of the Government, and as each year rolled by, first one and then another branch of manufacture sought Government aid and sustenance to keep the life breath in it, rather than depend upon legitimate business methods for success—or, to use the expressive illustration of the Indian orator, "They looked for nourishment like the porpoise at the squaw's breast, instead of like the mighty hunter from the broad forest and the running stream." A change of front on the question of Protection by the Government of the day would sound the death-knell of some of these so-called industries, and so it came to pass that no later than the last session of Parliament Hon. Mr. COLBY was put up to voice Cabinet sentiment in favor of hard and fast Protection lines.

However, in the time that has elapsed since the House met, there has been a change of opinion not only in individual statesmen, but in a large section of the electorate. Of late the question of Tariff Reform has been brought prominently before the people of this entire continent, and should Sir JOHN MACDONALD see that the spirit of freer trade relations has once again caught the people of Canada, he will not allow his speeches of 1878, his action in placing on the Statute Book (the Tariff of 1879, the conduct of his party on the question during the intervening years, or the voice of Hon. Mr. COLBY in 1890 to interfere with his course should he think a "sharp curve" necessary to checkmate his opponents at the next election.

For years Tariff Reform has been the principal plank in the Liberal platform, and today it holds the leading place. It is bound to win in the end. The spirit of the age is in favor of enlarged markets and less restrictions on trade. Whether Sir JOHN changes his policy or not let the Liberals remain firm, steadfast and true to the principles of Tariff Reform, and the result will be that no matter which party shall be "in" or "out" Canada will be the gainer by the removal of the restrictions which at present fetter our trade. As Mr. BLAINE has well put it:—"Reciprocal exchanges of tariff concessions will be equally effective in stimulating commerce and in increasing the export of the products of which we have the largest surplus."

Remove the Barriers to Trade.
That the boy is father to the man is now a generally accepted axiom, and the Mail brings the matter home to the Dominion Premier in the following manner: Sir JOHN MACDONALD was a frolicsome lad. An old companion of his youth gives a Kingston contemporary a sample of his juvenile pranks. Three or four young fellows, the coming Sir JOHN among them, were on their way home early one morning when they observed a heap of cut stone in front of a corner grocery. At the embryo statesman's suggestion all went to work and built up the door. In the morning the grocer descended into his shop to find that he was built in. "Begorra," he exclaimed, "and is the house sinking into the cellar?" Sir JOHN has not ceased playing that practical joke yet. He is still engaged in closing up the avenue through which trade makes its entrances and its exits.

From our own correspondent.
The municipal council of West ab, in pursuance of notice, met on Saturday, 21st at 10 o'clock, when the members were present. Meeting will be held in the same place on the 16th August next.

We presume the securing of the top is nearly at hand, and many rumors in this locality will come out.

It is pleasing to note that, in the health prevails. No sick by moment hereabouts.

The entrance examination of the High School commences, as elsewhere, at 9 o'clock, on the 3rd July, and continues on Sunday.

On the 25th inst., the late at the Nile camp meeting, where Dame Rumor has it her wards of three thousand people on that occasion. On Monday the meeting was brought to a close.

CONTUMPTUOUS MEAN ACT.—One of the recent election, and pored person or persons took large gate from the premises of C. Girvin, tailor in this village, not, so far, been brought to court, is to say the least, reprehensible, more particularly in the year, when the ladies made to garden products is inevitable to be hoped that the parties such conduct will be discovered and accordingly. Fun is full of outrageous acts are not to be indulged, but summarily dealt with.

Weather very propitious for the autumn crops. The apple crop, at least in this vicinity, is apparently so good as anticipated, and received a check by means of frost.

Farmers hereabouts are busied in summer-fallowing and in root crops. Statute labour for this year is among the past.

Mr. Jas. Taylor, of Iowa, U.S. Senator, resident of this locality, has been in town two weeks has been a native, friends and neighbors, to years since his last visit. He died at the great improvement have been made in our village.
