Origin of the Inniskilling Dragoons.

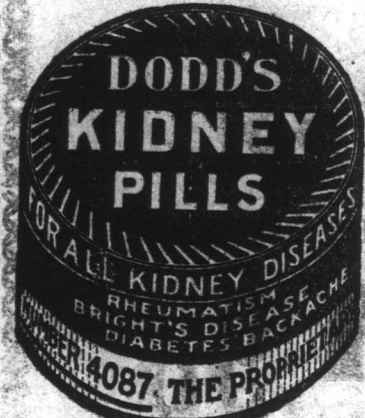

Perhaps no Irish Corps is as distinguished for dandified courage and daring deeds as the Inniskilling Dragoons and Inniskilling Fusiliers. Raised at Enniskillen at the latter end of September, 1689, the Fusiliers fought in Flanders in North America, and in the West Indies, in Holland and in the Peninsular War. In Spain the Inniskilleners were confronted by a regiment of the French Grenadiers. A French officer came in front of the Inniskillen regiment to single combat. Instantly a captain of the Irish Regiment accepted the challenge, and after a little brilliant sword play laid the Frenchman low. With a cheer for their brave champion the Inniskilleners rushed forward and made one of those terrible charges which no enemy could withstand. It turned out that the French officer's weapon was a sword of honour which had been presented to him by Napoleon himself. This trophy the champion of the Inniskilleners bore with him proudly off the field. At Waterloo the Inniskillen Regiment had to withstand a fearful cannonade, and at the time were attacked by French cavalry from La Haye Sainte. All that day they stood in compact, though ever lessening square, and at nightfall every officer and two-thirds of the rank and file were dead or wounded. No British regiment suffered so severely.

In the Boer War they fought at Colenso where they made a desperate effort to cross the river under the muzzles of the enemy's guns. Nor did they come back until Sir Redvers Buller gave the order, and then they retired extremely disappointed. At Rorke's Drift they had to climb a steep ascent among boulders and rocks, and then rush across a bare piece of ground before they could reach the enemy. They climbed up the slope in the face of thousands of Boers, each one a practised marksman. It was impossible to scale the bare ground; the Colonel and half the battalion fell killed or wounded in the attempt, but the brave Inniskilleners stuck to the rocks and held on until an important movement had been made and victory was won a day or two later.

Negative Argument.

Mr. Coaker's argument—that only for the meddling which put his fish regulations into the discard, the price of fish would be double what it is—would be as amusing if it were so guileless as that of the Irishman who found fault with the jury that pronounced him guilty of theft "on the testimony of two witnesses." The story runs thus: "And it is upon the oaths of these two witnesses yer honor is going to condemn me for theft?" asked Pat. "Certainly," said the judge, "their testimony was ample to convince the jury of your guilt. Two witnesses saw you take the things." "Oh, murther!" exclaimed Pat, "to condemn me on the oaths of two spalpeens who swear they saw me take the things, when I can bring forth a hundred who will swear they didn't see me do it?" At one time, in the beginning of his career as champion of the "dragoons," Mr. Coaker used to say the fish buyers were making wealth by not giving the fisherman a fair market price for his fish. To correct this and to force a higher price, Mr. Coaker began to offer higher prices than the merchants were willing to give.

The merchants then bought fish at the price set by Mr. Coaker and many of them lost on the transaction. Since Mr. Coaker finds himself the head of a large fish-buying concern he sees clearer and we have nothing of the blood-sucking proclivities of the merchants.

They are not making big gains at the expense of the fishermen, they are robbing themselves as well as the fishermen, through their foolish system of marketing.

Mr. Coaker attempted to correct this and his scheme failed and brought ruin in its wake as well.

Merchants saw the mistake soon and forced the repeal of the stupid regulations, but not until the mischief was done, and our markets destroyed.

If the system of marketing in vogue so long were so utterly wrong, how comes it that fishermen have not only put away millions of golden dollars but have sustained a galling burden of taxation at the same time? If we find it hard to live to-day it is because we are taxed to death, and not because we are getting little for our fish.

Let us correct our faults in this matter, reduce taxation at home, have common-sense and give up trying to impose our self-assumed burdens on the people who buy the products of our labor, and we shall soon see the sun of contentment above our heads.

If the people of Europe refuse to be dragged into making slaves of themselves in order to keep us living beyond our natural means small blame can be attached to them.

The trouble lies not in our system of marketing, but in our folly in trying to make a cat bear the trappings of an elephant, as a dead and gone Finance Minister might have said.

When we have to hand over seventy cents to the Government out of every dollar we earn somebody must suffer, and it is unreasonable to expect the people in Europe to bear the load which folly has laid upon us.

Our course is to adopt sanity and reduce taxation, and cease interfering with the natural laws—Public Opinion.

Bucaneering.

The notorious "fish export regulations" of which Mr. Coaker is the author, brought ruin to many a man engaged in the merchandising of our staple article of commerce, and to no one greater damage than to business men along the South Coast.

Business men from Placentia to Channel were driven to almost total extinction, some of them were entirely ruined during the hold-up of trade and commerce following those worse than stupid regulations.

Business men were crippled so badly that some of them had to assign, while others of them had to cut down operations almost to the disappearing point.

The coast suffered terribly, supplies were drastically curtailed and want stalked and dread invaded a region hitherto prosperous and happy. Now, Mr. Coaker plays his shameless part with an effrontery that only he could assume.

He comes to the rescue of the West Coast by establishing an F.P.U. Depot at Burin, where he may trade on the necessities created by the forced carrying out of obnoxious laws.

Related business men are unable to look after the trade of the coast, as Mr. Coaker thinks it ought to be looked after, so he comes to the rescue and invades a district whose former prosperity was the fruit of the intelligent and unfettered industry of its own people.

I dare say the business men along that stretch of coast will know how to appraise the value of the F.P.U. invasion at such an hour as this—Public Opinion.

IS YOUR ROOF IN GOOD CONDITION?

We Have

"BARRETT'S" ROOFING FELTS, 1, 2 and 3 Ply

Also COAL TAR in Tierces, Barrels & Cans

If your roof is in good condition give it a coat of Special Roof Coating Tar and keep it good. You know it is easier to keep a good roof free from leaks than to make a leaky roof watertight. Prevention is always better than cure. Special Roof Coating will prevent your roof from leaking and will keep it watertight for the next few years. A 5-gallon can costs $3.50. PUT IT ON THE FIRST WARM DAY.

If your roof leaks, fill up the cracks with Lasty-gum; put it on like putty, it won't crack like cement and won't run like tar. Lasty-gum will stop even the worst kind of leaks. Use it for flashing around chimneys and skylights. Use it around window boxes to exclude wind, dust and rain. A 5-pound pail of Lasty-gum costs $1.50. After stopping the leaks with Lasty-gum, coat the entire roof with Special Roof Coating.

If you require a new roof covering we recommend VULCANITE, which is made and guaranteed by The Beaver Board Company. Vulcanite can be had in full size rolls to cover 100 square feet of roof surface at $5.00 per roll, complete with nails and cement; also in half size rolls (18 inches wide) at $2.70 per roll complete with nails and cement. A half size roll will cover a porch or bay window roof.

We guarantee the good qualities of Special Roof Coating, Lasty-gum and VULCANITE ROOFING. Each is the best of its kind, warranted to give you satisfaction.
