Adam Graeme, of Mossgray. By Mrs. Oliphant.

Ey Mrs. Oliphant.

"Is it you?" said Mossgray. "Are we all real and in the flesh! is it no dream?"
How Murray put his arm through his friends—far through, as he had been used to do, with the your cert they dreamed together over the do, with poetic city on the breezy Caiton. "Give Lucy your other arm, Ad-m," said the familiar genial voice, "and we will tell year all our story." "I have you never been away! is it all a fream those 30 years?" 'erled Adam Graeme. "Look at me again," said Lucy Murray have he lesh white hand of the old lady whom she feated, and then Isabell abruptly continued the will the scene of your never been away! is it all a fream those 30 years?" 'erled Adam Graeme. "Look at me again," said Lucy Murray with a smile.

"No—there are things in those 30 years to precious a partwin. I think you have not seen my sen."

"Your son, Lucy—I it my Lily's Hew?" asked Mossgray. "Your son, Lucy—I it my Lily's Hew?" to room, pointing cut the scene of youthful games and merymakin: a. Lilis of the cought our boy and I together?"

"I am bewilderen' overpowered," said Mossgray. "Your son, Lucy—I it they will you were living at all ast to a fant you were living at all ast to a fants of cream—that it is 30 years live to the hope that you were living at all ast to a fants of cream—that it is 30 years live to the hope that you were living at all ast to a fants of cream—that it is 30 years live to the laye but who is this?"

How Murray? grasped his friend's arm think you have not the sunting who again? where have you been! The will have you kept up the sober expectation of finding you again? where have you been? The will have been expectation of finding you again? where have you have the will have a line of the policy of the noise. They were standing in front of ti—and their voices had atartied her.

"Who is it?" Lucy Murray looked at her with some anxioty. "I think 'it must be stabell Brown."

The little old woman, the housekeeper of Murrayshaugh, came quickly round the gould be the noise. They were standing in fron

"I thought it was only gangrel folk. If I had kent it was you, Mossgray, I wadna have disturbed you, but maybe the lady and the gentleman wad like to see the hoose."

hoose."
She looked at them again with a jealous eye; the feeling was instinctive. Isabeil did not know why she was suspicious of those friends of Mossgray.

oye; he feding was uspicious of those friends of Mossgray.

"Do you not know me, Isabell?" said the graceful old lady, holding outher hand.

Isabell drew back with a sight courtesy.

"Na—there's a few ladies ever came about Murrayshaugh in my time; Miss Lucy had mair maids than me—y'ere maybe taking me for my sister."

"There was no one else but Jean, I think, Isabell," said Lucy, smiling; "and Jean was not like you. She was as tall as I am, and she had red hair. We gave her blue ribbons on Hew's birthday because they suited her 'guiddy face—do you mind, I abell? and do you not know me now?"

Isabell drew further back—the old woman looked scared, suspicious, afraid.

"Na, I dinna ken ye, madam," she repeated firmly. "I ken few fremd ladies—I hacen been in the way o' them—how should Lucy smiled; it brightened her face in the caim of its peacefulness into warmer and sunnier life.

"If you do not know me, Isabell, do you know Hew?"

know Hew?"
The old woman cast a jealous, angry look upon the sunburned face of Hew Murray—her tone became abrupt and peevish.
"I'm no to kon wha yo're meaning, madam—I never saw ye before nor the gentleman neither. I've lived in Murray-shaugh a' my days, but the like o' me wana to see a' the company; and how should I ken the gentleman?"

shangh a' my days, but the like o' me whould I ken to see a' the company; and how should I ken to see a' the company; and how should I ken the gentleman?"

The sharp black eyes twinkled through a tear affectionate and angry. The old woman was airated those stranger people, woman was airated those without a bottle when their children are technic.

"I have a misgiving in this affair," as the father said when he gave away the bride. The same have the first and the moss you put round them in the basket? I think I have some of the first and the moss you put round them in the basket? I think I have some of the first have you really forgotten—did you think, Adam, that any one could ever forget our sister Lucy Murray? "

Trembring and considerably excited Isabell stood on the defensive still.

"I never kent any of the name but Mss. Under the properties of the properties. Allen Millon Browning, of Hunting on, W. Va., is 60 years old, has been married six times and has 67 children.

Luey disengaged herself from Mossgray's arm. "Come, Isabell, we will let them in. And so you remembered poor Luey Murray and thought that time had spared her! But I am older than you. I used to have my white roses. What has become of my roses? But I have something better to show you; my son, Isabell, my young Hew, and now come, we'll et them in." And Lucy turned along the narrow path to Isabell's back door; jealously, and in sullen silence, the old woman followed her. "But, Hew, Hew, where you have been?" repeated the astenished Mossgray, as they waited for the opening of the great door. "In India, Adam; ait this time buried in the depths of India, without having any power or means of letting you know that I lived; but wait, wait till we are all together. You shall hear the whole of my story to-night." The heavy door was swung open, Lucy had opened it, and Isabell, jealous and silent, stood behind, "Come in, come home, flew," said Lucy Murray. "Let us enter our father's house in peace and thankfulness as we left it with sorrow." Lucy disengaged herself from Mossgray's THE QUEEN'S DOGS

THE QUEEN'S DOGS.

Dogs were first admitted to the court of England in the reign of Henry VIII. Under the present reign three dogs have been elevated to the highest eanine dignities on account of their aristocratic families and their own peculiar merits. The names of the aristocratic trio are Marco, Roy and Spot. Marco is the Queen's favorite, and he used to be very jealous of John Brown. His ancestry can be traced back to the crusaders. He is what they call in England a Pomerainan, and at one of the recent dog shows won the first prize, the mug of Murray. "Let us enter our father's house in peace and thankfulness as we left it with sorrow."

They entered in silence, and silently the brother and sister went through the faded, dreary rooms; while the old woman followed them like a shadow.

Last of all they went into "Miss Luoy's par'or." It had no very sad associations for How. He remembered only the pleasant boyish evenings spent in it, the sainess of the parting, which now, so far away, was softened into a tender memory, making its seen not mournful, only dear; and How lifted the window and stepped happily out upon the terrace, while Lucy seated herself on the old high-backed chair at the old work-table, to wonder on the old times. To her the room was full of dim days well remembered — girlish griefs and solitudes, strugles which no one witted of—they seemed to have been dwelling here like so many pale ghosts, waiting for her coming, to remind her of their former selves.

A touch on her sleever coused Lucy from her reverie. Isabell was looking down earnestly into her silvery, gentle face.

"Leddy—madam," said the old woman, with a husky voice, "you dinna mean you? You wasna saving that you're Miss Lucy?"

"I am Miss Laoy Murray grown old, "was the answer, "and that is my brother How, Isabell; whom we lost in India. Could you forcet Hew? Do you not know Hew, Isabell; whom we lost in India. Could you forcet Hew? Do you not know Hew, Isabell; whom we lost in India. Could you forcet Hew? Do you not know Hew, Isabell; "And Murrayshaugh?" gasped the old woman.

"My father is dead; he lived until ten saders. He is what they call in England a Pomeranian, and at one of the recent dog shows won the first prize, the mug of honor. The other favorite, Roy, is a collie, and Spot is a fox terrier with a record of 22 rats in a quarter of an hour. These canine lords have their residences with their special names. Her majesty's dog place is divided into three parts, the Queen's veranda, collie court and umbrella court. The veranda is the principal one. It is a covered gallery around the kennel, and the Queen likes to walk there. Each kennel has a dining-room and a bedroom. The floor of the dining-room is separated from the veranda by an iron grating. It is paved with red and blue bricks, and the furniture consists of a trough, always full of fresh water. The bedrooms have two large windows generally kept open for the purpose of ventilation, and in a snug corner in cach room there is a low bed with a mattress of fresh straw. Umbrella court gets its name from the big umbrella in the middle of it, under which the dogs can shelter themselves from the sun and rain. A host of servants wait upon the canine nobility, and the Queen is very severe with the efficials who do not pay proper attention to her dogs. A chef is provided for them, and his instructions are to vary the menu of the dinners of her Majesty's pets and to consult their tastes.—[Sporteman's Review.

The Council Holds a Very Short Session,

But Transacts a Good Deal of Business -Resolution of Condolence With Ald. O'Meara - A Free Library Offer - No Street Railway Talk.

The City Council got through business in 55 minutes last night—and transacted a good deal of it, too, in that time. There were present: Mayor Spencer, Ald. Connor, John Heaman, Jeffery, Moule, Jones, Wm. Heaman, Gartshore, Leonard, Jadi, Parnell, Fitzgerald, Shaw, Hannah and City Clerk Kingston.

A RESOLUTION OF CONDOLENCE.
Ald. Moule moved, seconded by Ald. Jeffery: "Whereas it has pleased Almighty God to remove by death the wife of Ald. O'Meara, an old and respected member of the council; be it resolved that the sympathy and condolence of this council is hereby extended to Ald. O'Meara and family in their great bereavement. Carried by a standing vote."

hereby extended to family in their great bereavement. Carried by a standing vote."

A FRIEE LIBRARY CFFER.

A communication was read from Mr. Thomas Green, containing this offer on behalf of the board of directors of the Mechanics' Institute:

1. To throw open to the public the reading-room of the Mechanics' Institute in consideration of an annual grant of $500 from the City Council. 2. Or to open to the public both the reading-room and library, if the City Connell will increase such annual grant to $1,000. 3. Should either of the above proposals be accepted the mayor or one other member of the council will be invited to a seat on the board of directors.

This was referred to No. 1. It is understood the offer has been withdrawn for the time being.

Ald. Judd said the Board of Health should go ahead and do its duty. It was independent of the council, and if it desired any expenditure to be made it did not need to consult the council.
Ald. Bitzgerald agreed with Ald. Judd if there was any cleaning up to be done the board should do it at once.
On Ald. J. Heaman's motion the matter was sent back to the board to take action.
COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.
V. Cronyn—Hinting that the engineer's statement as to the amount the street railway company had cost the city was hardly accurate.
