This was partly overcome by an intimation from treasury quarters that the certificates would be available for circulation, but because the assurance did not come in any official manner or from an official source, it was felt that it might not be conclusive should subsequent legal questions arise. Now, however, it is the accepted view in banking circles that an intimation from treasury quarters that the certificates would be available for circulation, but because the assurance did not come in any official manner or from an official source, it was felt that it might not be conclusive should subsequent legal questions arise. Now, however, it is the accepted view in banking circles that the certificates can be utilized for a basis for circulation, but not for bank reserves.

The flow of gold into the country continues to be heavy, largely because the recent premium on currency induced money speculators to import foreign gold for the profit of the transaction. The total transactions today were $7,800,000, which with previous were $7,800,000, which with previous were $7,800,000, which with previous engagements carries the total for the last few days to an aggregate far in excess of any gold importation in the history of American finance. It is noticeable that a large part of today's engagements are from France, a market which has hitherto been but lightly touched. That is not due to any direct movement of gold by the bank of France, but at the same time the private shippers of gold from France are obliged to draw their stock from the Bank of France, which is the central custodian of the French gold supply.
