WATFORD, DECEMBER 12, 1913. Untair to the Small Retail Merchant

The smaller retail merchants throughout the country are at an unfair disadvantage under the present postal arrangements. Because they are subsidized by the big mail order houses, some of the metropolitan dailies are selling their newspapers at outside points at a mere fraction of what the white paper costs. As these advertising sheets go through mails at newspaper rates, it simply means that the government is circulating the advertising literature of the big department stores free of charge. Already the mails are almost clogged with these advertising sheets and the situation is becoming steadily worse. A pointed editorial on this subject from the Drygoods Review published two weeks ago points out that a number of the metropolitan dailies are now coutrolled by the big department stores. The mail order dailies do not actually interfere with the circulation of local newspapers except possibly in selling an unfair standard of newspaper values. The unfairness is in a greater degree to the retailers. The effort of some local newspapers to give their town merchants a fair show by refusing to carry department store
