WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 3RD, 1902

-The Boston Globe, under the caption of "American Expansion," suggests a destiny for Canada far ren ed from the perfection of imperial federation plans. While we have been congratulating ourselves upon securing a desirable class of farmer immigrants from the United States it may be well for us to consider the increase in the light of the Globe's remarks. It may be that that journal is but making a sorry excuse for an exodus that is eriously affecting the American northwest, and hopes to frighten the Canadian people into an effort to check the shifting population. At any rate the Globe article is a somewhat startling prediction and we reproduce portions of it, bearing directly on the outlined peaceful conquest of Canadian great men of state have been forcing an American expansion into the l'a-cific and the Antilles, some plain farmers, in single file, unmarshaled and un-armed, without banners, uniforms or bugies, have achieved in the northwest of Canada a greater American expansion than we shall see in the Philippines or the West Indies in the course of a thousand years.

Neither the old flag nor an appro Netther the old hag nor an appro-priation has encouraged them in their mission of benevotent assimilation. No hell-roaring general has led them on their forward march. They did not go to make a wilderness, but to con-

According to an estimate in the Brit-According to an estimate in the British house of lords, 50,000 Americans settled in Canada last year, and, according to a prediction made in the same place and at the same time, 200,000 will settle there this year. An Ontario newspaper reckons that Americans have bought 5,000,000 agree in cans have bought 5,000,000 acres in Manitoba and the Northwest territories since the beginning of 1902.

Probably there is exaggeration in these figures. It is extremely doubtful if the migration has yet reached such extraordinary proportions, and much of the land recently purchased has been taken by large syndicates. Nevertheless it is known that nearly 1,000,000 acres of it is held as homesteads by Americans who have gone thither, principally from Minnesota, lowa and the Dakotas.

preover, a Chicago newspaper gives the names of a dozen great manufacturers of agricultural implements who are preparing to set up factories in Canada, and it asserts that there are canada, and it asserts that there are thirty others engaged in the same pre-parations. While those concerns are undoubtedly looking for the general Canadian trade, free from tariff re-strictions, their enterprise must bear some relation to the exodus of American farmers.

This movement is peculiarly oppor-tune in one sense at least. It serves to afford a comparison, as close and plain as that of parallel columns. between the old and the new methods of American expansion. The unigra-tion to Canada of simple home seek-who are moving beyond our oundary are entering Canada without any hostility to Canadian institutions and are welcomed without any fear of political aggression. Unlike the Tex-an pioneers, they will find in their rew home a liberal government well estab-lished, which they can accept without detriment to their prosperity or their cross the line at the north of us, but theirs is the first voluntary migration in that direction. New Brunswick was founded by Americans, and parts of Ontario was settled by them, but those emigrants were the loyalists of the revolution, who parted with us in anger, and had no reason to cherish any friendliness toward the land from which they had been driven.

But however innocent the present

ence upon the tie between Canada and the United States.

The population of the entire Dominion is about .5,000,000. Yet Prof. Goldwin Smith says that more than half as many Canadians, or 3,000,000 sons and daughters and grandchildren of Canada, are living in the United States. Most of those people are to be found here in the east, and we know how they and their kindred at home slowly but surely are knitting the two countries together. It naturally follows that the Americans in the Canadian northwest, from the Red River adian northwest, from the Red River to the Klondike, who are going there in larger numbers than the immigrants from any other country, will supple-ment this steady process of unification.

Both movements are certain to de- an opportunity to visit all if desired.

The cause of the fire is unknown. The house was owned by Mrs. Walter Gilliatt of Granville.

But however innocent the present day immigrants may be of any propaganda, they inevitably will carry with them American ideas in politics as well as in agriculture. Even as the British settlers there serve to strength en the tip between Canada and Great Britain, their American neighbors will naturally exert a strengthening influence upon the tie between Canada and the United States.

In this issue is the advertisement of the Yarmouth County Exhibition, which takes place at Yarmouth on Sept. 24th and 25th, and which bids fair to be as successful as any previous one. Kentville also holds an exhibition this year, on Oct. 1st and 2nd, in which considerable interest is being manifested. The St. John exhibition is being held this week, and the Halifax exhibition opening a week later gives the farmers of western Nova Scotia the choice of dates and an opportunity to visit all if desired.

Both movements are certain to detach Canada more and more from Europe, and ultimately to bind her wholly to this continent. Those who have gone from the United States will not lose their instinctive love of political independence, and those who come hither soon will acquire, in this captionment, the same ideal.

Under those combined influences the principle of colonial dependence must pass away, and Canada enter upon her manifest destiny as an American State, either within or without our union, either under the stars and stripes or under a flag of her own. Time alone will determine her status. But that she will outgrow and discard the howels which link her to the all the stars and stripes or under a flag of her own. Time alone will determine her status.
