

FRANCE'S NEW CABINET NAMED

CASE OF CHILD IS SUBJECT OF ADVICE

Medical Health Officer Speaks of Little One at Health Centre.

At the Saint John Health Centre, a school-age child, a pitiable case was brought to the attention of Dr. William Warwick, medical health officer. It was a child of two and a half years of age, weighing 14 pounds, less than it should have weighed and was unable to walk. The doctor made a diagnosis of rickets, and the mother was advised to give the child cod liver oil. The child has been back to the clinic several times and is getting stronger daily. Dr. Warwick, in speaking of this case yesterday, said that rickets were only too common and could very easily be prevented. The simple facts of child health were generally known.

In describing the child's condition when he first came, he said that it was a prominent abdomen, decidedly pale skin, enlarged tonsils, decayed teeth and what to the most casual observer was the most striking condition, enlargement of the lower ends of the long bones, especially the forearms and legs, with very definite deformity of these bones, forward bowing.

WHAT RICKETS ARE.

Speaking of the characteristics of the disease Dr. Warwick said: "Rickets is an acquired disease of infancy and early childhood, very common, more frequent and severe among the poor of cities, though not by any means rare among the well-to-do. It is, in itself, rarely fatal, but produces much illness and many deformities, often permanent; and it has an important bearing indirectly upon infant mortality, in that children with rickets have a much lower resisting power to infection of various kinds."

"The early symptoms of rickets are not definite or distinctive, and it is only when marked changes take place in the bones that the disease is usually detected. General symptoms may be fretfulness and restlessness, lack of desire to play, sweating around the head, the child is usually pale, the abdomen prominent and constipation is the rule. In some cases there is malnourishment, but in others the child appears very well nourished."

SUNLIGHT ESSENTIAL.

"While proper food is essential for the well-being of the baby it is now known for certain that sunlight is the essential element that cures and prevents rickets, or more properly the ultra-violet rays of the sun are the important ones. These ultra-violet rays are easily filtered from sunlight by glass, and certain kinds of clothing. The history obtained from the mother of the child referred to showed that it had not only been fed on a diet which was totally unsuited to an infant, but that it had also not been exposed to the direct rays of the sun to any appreciable extent. It has long been known that cod liver oil would prevent and cure rickets, but only recently has it been learned that the oil moves these properties to a radiation of ultra-violet rays, or in other words, to the stored energy of the sun in the oil."

"May the Best Man Win." (New York Times)

It will be remembered that when Thackeray had a passing ambition for public life, he stood for one of the Oxford seats in the House of Commons. Meeting his opponent in the course of the canvass, Thackeray had a few friendly words with him and took leave, saying: "Well, may the best man win." The other replied, with a ready wit which he is said never to have displayed again: "Oh, I hope not." Anyhow, Thackeray was beaten.

Lack of Home Port Services Promotes Trade Through U. S.

Staff representative of The Telegraph-Journal and Evening Times-Star, who is now on an active canvass of Canadian imports and exporters in behalf of the more general use of Canadian ports.

TORONTO, Oct. 28.—The more the matter of Canadian trade through American ports is probed the clearer it is that lack of Canadian services accounts for a large volume of this business. For example, the William Davies Co., Ltd. are large shippers of packing house products through New York. They export largely to London. The London dealer wants supplies every Monday morning. There is no Canadian service, summer or winter, that guarantees such regular delivery. Moreover, the products are perishable, and time is a consideration, and the New York route is at least two days faster than via Saint John. R. B. Mills carefully explained the situation, pointing out that the company's business is steady throughout the year, and that to hold its trade it must give regular and prompt delivery. More than fifty per cent. of their business is done through Canadian ports, and they would be very glad if regularity of service and the necessary refrigerator space were available so that they could use our own ports far more extensively.

A SIMILAR story of lack of service was told by H. W. Blahout, at the Dunlop Tire & Rubber Goods Co.'s office. He showed me the invoices of six shipments just sent out via New York for Valparaiso, Rangoon, Johannesburg, Cape Town and Port Elizabeth. The African shipments might have gone through a Canadian port, but the steamer space was all taken and no more would be available till November. Here, again, lack of service accounted for the use of an American port. The assistant manager of the Dunlop Tire Co. is A. E. King, another Saint John man who had to leave the Maritimes to get his opportunity. He is a son of the late Arthur King, for many years with the Saint John Telegraph. I was assured by him that the company routed all possible trade through Canadian ports, and was in full sympathy with my mission. Their crude rubber is usually bought through brokers, much of it aloft, and it comes via New York for that reason. Mr. King offered to place a car at my disposal at any time to facilitate my work, and I am to be Mr. Blahout's guest at a joint luncheon of three Kiwanis clubs on Wednesday.

An illustration of how cheap tonnage often available at New York affects Canadian ports was given me by Mr. Brunditt, of the Canadian Flour Export Co., Ltd. He had been able to send a shipment of flour to Amsterdam via New York about eight cents per barrel cheaper than by way of Montreal. It was a direct service, and wanted the business badly enough to make the low rate. In all cases where it is possible the company uses Canadian ports.

At the offices of Lever Bros. I was told of palm oil from Nigeria that comes via New York, and other oils that come via Seattle, which has a strong grip on that business. The company does not use American ports when Canadian service is available.

I was accompanied on my rounds today by Mr. Fullerton of the Canadian Pacific foreign freight staff.

MILAN, Oct. 29.—The Fascist regime cannot be overthrown except by force, Premier Mussolini declared yesterday, in a speech before an audience which packed the Scala Theatre, in celebration of the Third Anniversary of the Fascist march on Rome.

If its opponents believe themselves able to overthrow Fascism, "with little groupings of lobbyists, and with little rivers of more or less dirty ink," the Premier said they would be disillusioned.

"Ministries may pass," he declared, "but the regime born of the revolution will cut off all attempts at counter-revolution, and will realize all its ideals."

CAPTAIN GIVES UP THREE MEN AS LOST

Commander of J. O. Webster Talks to Agents—Were of "Boxing Schooner."

Capt. Beryn Bradford, of the schooner J. O. Webster, which was disabled in the heavy gales last week-end, informed F. P. Elkin, of R. C. Elkin Ltd., local agents for the schooner, yesterday over the long distance telephone from Rockland, Me., that he was sure his son, Stanley, had been drowned and that he had entered little hope regarding the rescue of his son. Capt. Bradford added that while his son was crawling out on the jibboom to take in one of the jibs, the schooner dived into a heavy sea and the 19-year-old lad was washed off into the sea.

WELL KNOWN HERE

Boxing fans in the city will remember Stanley Bradford, who has appeared in several bouts here under the name of "Young Stanley." Capt. Bradford was also known in local circles as "Kid" Bradford while the mate, Vincent Kendrick, who has been reported saved, boxed under the name of "Jim Kendrick." All were former members of the schooner Harriet B., known as the "boxing schooner" because all the members were boxers. The Harriet B. went ashore some time ago and was abandoned, practically the same crew taking over the J. O. Webster.

"CASEY" SCORES IN ROBBERIES KILL ONE, NEW SCREEN DRAMA GET $93,000 LOOT

J. Farrell MacDonald Adds to Laurels at Queen Square in Kentucky Pride.

J. Farrell MacDonald, who attained his full measure of screen greatness as Corporal Casey in "The Iron Horse," considers himself fortunate to be cast in so appropriate a role as that of "Mike Donovan," the horse trainer in "Kentucky Pride," a William Fox attraction now playing at the Queen Square Theatre. Mike is just such a two-fisted tender-hearted Irishman as Corporal Casey, and the new role fits Mr. MacDonald like a glove.

"Kentucky Pride" is all about horses. It is the life story of Virginia's Future, a royally bred filly, as told by herself. It was Mike Donovan who presided at her birth, who broke her to halt, who saddled her for the first time. She was the apple of his eye, destined to be the next "greatest race horse." And finally it was Mike who taught her "to run straight and fast," in which rule of conduct the clean Kentucky pride finds its best expression.

Just as she was about to win her first race, fifty feet from the wire, Virginia's Future fell and broke her leg, thereby ruining not only herself but her owner, who had bet on her the remnants of his dwindling fortune. Evil times came to both, especially the famed filly, until at last she became the chattel of a brutal peddler, who abused her unmercifully. Then it was Mike who discovered her and rescued her in time to see her daughter, Confederacy, win a thrilling race and redeem the family fortunes, equine and human.

This picture will have its final showings at 7 and 8:45 tonight.
