Commissioners Before Judge Cassels are Cautious

---Brodeur Cleared

Ottawa, May 4.---The investigation by Mr. Justice Cassels into the general charges of wrong doing on the part of officials of the marine and fisheries department, as made in the report of the civil service commission, was begun at noon Saturday in the court room of the supreme court with a large attendance of members of the departmental staff, members of parliament, the three civil service commissioners, counsel and others interested in what promises to be one of the most interesting public investigations affecting the public service during recent years.

That the investigation will be a public one, and will be thorough in respect to the working of the department during the period covered by the references made in the report, namely from 1904 to the present, was made evident by Judge Cassels' opening statement as to his views regarding the scope and nature of the inquiry. Those who made the charges were naturally the first called upon to give evidence from which a beginning might be made to clear up the cloud of suspicion now resting upon every official of the department. Commissioners Fyfe and Bazin, who particularly dealt with that portion of the report bearing upon the marine and fisheries department, and who are primarily responsible for the serious charges made, were examined. Unfortunately, however, little assistance was gained from them which might help either to specify the parties who are guilty or exculpate those who are not.

Mr. Fyfe stoutly declined to go beyond his own report, declared that he had not been acting as a detective to find out who was and who was not guilty, and even though he admitted he could name one or two officials whom he had in mind he repeatedly refused to point to any one individual. "I accuse nobody of anything," he said. "I neither accuse nor exculpate anybody."

The only assistance that the present commission could get from him, he asserted, was what was already contained within the civil service report itself. He took the ground that having found the system in vogue in the department wrong the officials must therefore be guilty, beyond that he would not particularize nor would he express any regret for having in one sweeping charge condemned the staff of the department, innocent and guilty alike.

In reply to further questions the witness asserted that Colonel Goudreau, the deputy minister, was not under any particular implication of guilt. His position today was no worse than it had been for years and the same held true of the other officials of the department. "We charge nobody with anything."

In examination by Mr. Watson, Mr. Bazin declared that he, with Mr. Fyfe, was responsible for this part of the civil service commission report, which had been based on personal examinations of documents in the department. He agreed with the incorporation in the report of the phrase regarding "a lack of conscience" on the part of officials. It was not intended to apply this to any particular officials but the commission was speaking of the department as a whole. "I wish it understood, however," he said, "that I had no reference to the Minister himself." Mr. Watson went over with Mr. Bazin the same questions that he had put to Mr. Fyfe, with practically the same result. Mr. Bazin said he could not name any particular official guilty of wrong doing and could accuse no one in particular.

Lost His Voice Entirely

Mr. J. H. Woods, of Point Rock, Oneida Co., N. Y., had a hard experience. "A bad attack of Catarrh settled in my forehead and the pain over my eyes was so intense I thought my head would burst. My voice grew very hoarse and I coughed every night, and through the winter could scarcely speak. My voice was gone. Two doctors didn't help me at all. The next doctor ordered 'Catarrhazone.' It cured me and now many others use it also. My doctor says he doesn't know anything so good for Catarrh and Throat Troubles as 'Catarrhazone.' Use it today your better tomorrow, 25c, and $1.00 at all dealers. Try Catarrhazone."

Ocean Tramps Must Disappear

The square rigger may find consolation in the fact that it is not the only type of vessel that it doomed. Its distant cousin the tramp, that much abused and misused name being applied to about every cargo steamer that doesn't carry mails, is having a hard time making a living.

A tramp is supposed to be a steamer that can be chartered to go anywhere, but nobody ever boarded one whose officers acknowledged that their vessel was a tramp. She always belongs to some line, and they will show the symbol on her smokestack and rattle off to the visitor the names of her sisters, all having been christened from a certain class of names.

The bigger part of the ocean carrying trade is now controlled by regular lines to the exclusion of the tramps. Their presence on the ocean is looked upon as detrimental to the carrying trade because their output tends to reduce freights.

Again, the tramp has subjectively a hard time because she is frequently heavily mortgaged to her builders, which handicaps her profitable operation. The ocean is narrowing for the tramp and in time she may disappear altogether.

Great Strike

London May 1.---The negotiations for a settlement of the shipbuilding dispute have failed again, and the lookout notices issued a week ago, will go into effect tomorrow, at all the yards of the United Kingdom.

If the lockout referred to in the above despatch does become effective fully a quarter of a million workmen will be directly involved.

The trouble began early in January of this year, with a strike of the shipbuilders on the Tyne. By the middle of February they had been joined by the allied engineers who voted by an overwhelming majority against a reduction of wages.

A meeting was held in Carlisle on April 24 between representatives of the Unions and the shipbuilders of the Country. The Union men tried to get the employers to submit the strike on the Northeast Coast to arbitration, but this was refused by the Federation, which decided to order a lockout in every yard in the Kingdom unless the men on the Northeast Coast resumed work. The time has now elapsed and the employers still insist that the strikers return to work at reduced wages.

Peculiar Weakness in Women

Many women suffer untold torture from nervous debility arising from disorders of the feminine organs. Day by day they grow worse. A false sense of modesty prevents them using a good remedy like Ferrozone,--and it would cure them. Lost nerve force is brought back--new vital energy is supplied--irregularities disappear. Ferrozone does restore weak pale women. For those who suffer and find work hard to bear nothing supplies the health and vitality that Ferrozone so surely brings. Guaranteed free from alcohol and sure to cure, 50c. at all dealers.

The Clever Girl

The girl who works--God bless her. She is brave and active. She is not too proud to earn her own living or ashamed to be caught at her daily task. She smiles at you from behind counter or desk. It is an honor to know this girl--to be worthy of her regard. Her hands may be stained by dish washing, sweeping, factory grease or printing ink, but it is an honest and helping hand. It stays misfortunes from homes; it is our shield which protects many a forlorn little family from the almshouse and asylum.

The Sunshine

Everybody should live on the sunny side of their houses as much as possible; and allow the sun's genial rays to penetrate the rooms. Darkened parlors are fashionable evils. True, it is gloomy enough to be ushered into a tomb-like apartment, when one can scarcely grope his way to a seat, and to discover, when his eyes become accustomed to the dim light, that every chair and sofa has on its "duster," apparently equipped for traveling to some unknown land. But ladies must have their carpets kept bright and fresh, even if their cheeks are the paler for it! And so the shutters are tightly closed, and the heavy curtains drawn. But for the sake of health and beauty ladies, let this be done only in the best "parlor," if it must be done at all. Let the rooms where the family live be cheerful and sunny. No lady would expect her house plants to send out full, brilliant blossoms unless she placed them at a window where the sunshine would invigorate them. No more could she expect her children to show fresh, rosy complexions, or to develop genial dispositions, unless they live in light, sunny, airy rooms.

Domestic Life

We are afraid that our domestic life in this country will not bear looking into. We fear that our houses will not be found to have unity, and to express the best thought. The household, the calling, the friendships of the citizen are not homogeneous. His house ought to show us his honest opinion of what his well-being consists in when he rests among his kindred, and forgets all affection, all compliance, and even all exertion of will. He brings home thither whatever commodities and ornaments have for years allured his pursuit, and his character must soon be in them. But what idea predominates in our houses? Thrift first, then convenience and pleasure. Take off the roofs from street to street, and we shall seldom find the temple of any higher god than Prudence. The progress of domestic living has been in cleanliness, in ventilation, in health, in decorum, in countless means and arts of comfort, in the consecration of all the nullities of every clime in each house. They are arranged for low benefits. The houses of the rich are confectioners' shops, where we get sweetmeats and wine; the houses of the poor are imitations of these to the extent of their ability. With these ends, house-keeping is not beautiful; it cheers and raises neither the husband, the wife, nor the child; neither the host, nor the guest; it oppresses women. A house kept to the end of prudence is laborious without joy; a house kept to the end of display is impossible to all but a few women, and their success is dearly bought.

Condemned By Physicians
Unscrupulous dealers often prepare corn remedies with caustics and acids. Refuse such, and insist on Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. It's purely vegetable, safe and sure.
