Boston, August 5.—To defend the Hug from the charge of being the most extravagant city in America the Boston girl would like to say that perhaps nowhere else is so much done to make people comfortable. The sight of more than one hundred thousand people on a warm Sunday enjoying the sea breezes on the recreation piers and bridges at City Point is enough to make one exclaim that if you must live in a big city Boston is the place. It costs more to run the city than some others, but perhaps—HAS rebelled, raising louder each day her protest and demand that this foolish, artificial, hair-destroying toilet aid be banished from Dame Fashion's dresser.
 And woman has won. The "rat" is doomed, is already passing away from the scene, scampering away when shown up to wank in its true light.
 New styles displayed by "Madam" this fall will show how the milliner recognizes an accomplished fact and is building her creations with smaller crowns, to fit the rat-less head.
 "Yes, it's true, the 'rat' must go," said the girl at the hairdresser's to her favorite customer. "And it's all because women have at last come to their senses."
 "The rebellion began with some sensible woman upon whom it suddenly dawned one day that the lifeless, jack-luster, falling condition of her hair must be blamed upon her 'rat'."

THE STORMING OF THE RUDDYS
How Mary Elizabeth Defied the Greeks for Two Whole Days—Story of Brooklyn's Tenement District.

New York, August 7.—Plus Aeneas of Troy, who carried Anchises, his father and all the household gods on his shoulders away from an impending real estate slump in the good old days, deserved the minimum of honor no more than does Mary Elizabeth Ruddy, lately of 108 North Elliott Place, Brooklyn. To be sure, Mary Elizabeth did not carry her father away from the beleaguered citadel on her shoulders, but she did remove all the lares and penates, including the cat, after having withstood the treacherous Greeks who stormed the approaches to the sacred Ruddy hearthstone during two bitter days.
 In the case of P. Aeneas bitter wanderings and many adventures befell after the heroic levitation of the father and the familiar deities. None the less so with Mary Elizabeth, who yesterday set her apron for a sail and thus made of herself a fitful galley, steering wildly along all the coasts of Myrtle avenue and Fleet street, seeking a new land where she should fulfill the prophecy of the Sibylline leaves of the house renting agency. Apollo's westing steeds kicked the dust from Hoboken heights back on the head of Pia Mary Elizabeth, stranded temporarily in the shoals of Navy street with the household gods heaped in confusion before a new and strange altar.

And Here's the Yarn.
 'Twas this way, O Augustus! Mary Elizabeth, her father, John and her brothers, Phil and Frankie, all lived in happy accord on the top floor of the ancient brick house on North Elliott place, knowing no enemy and loving their neighbors. Came one day an inspector of the Tenement House Department who prodded the old foundations and fingered the crumbling abutments. The housemaster so, seeking a new land with sternness. "You must go," said Agent Carlo Rokechis, addressing each of the tenants in turn.
 "When" then upspoke Mary Elizabeth, the daughter of the housekeeper and jealous protector.
 "Immediately," Agent Rokechis then made reply.
 "Not," then quoth Mary Elizabeth, who is one given to little wasting of the breath.
 That was less than a week ago. More timorous tenants on the first floor and second floor of the condemned building moved on Tuesday. Mary Elizabeth and her brother Frankie leaned far from the entrenched battlements of the third floor and gazed down in derision upon the craven heads of those faint-hearted ones who had heeded the threat of the agent and who were decamping so precipitately.

"What Ho! the Greeks."
 Again Agent Rokechis appeared. He stood on the sidewalk and made a funnel of his hands. The words carried up to Mary Elizabeth with a tang of anger.
 "Do you get out before the wreckers begin or do I get a dispossession?"
 "Get your wreckers. Get your dispossession," came the taunt from that square of blackness illumined by the ambrosial locks of Mary Elizabeth. "Do you think me a going to quit work 'n' lose his job a-movin' because of you?"
 Then on Wednesday came the army of the Greeks. They came not by stealth; the wooden horse except a child's toy stool could enter the portal of this defended stronghold. But boldly and with their picks and saws in their hands came the Greeks, Papa Anaxypopolis leading them. They attacked the portal; it yielded. They went on into the house and the smash of their sledges and the shrill-

Win in Rebellion Against the Rat

THE BACK OF THE HEAD, AFTER A SIMPLE, RAT-LESS COIFFURE IS ARRANGED.

By Cynthia Grey.
 The rebellion against the rat—yes, that's the proper word, for woman HAS rebelled, raising louder each day her protest and demand that this foolish, artificial, hair-destroying toilet aid be banished from Dame Fashion's dresser.
 And woman has won. The "rat" is doomed, is already passing away from the scene, scampering away when shown up to wank in its true light.
 New styles displayed by "Madam" this fall will show how the milliner recognizes an accomplished fact and is building her creations with smaller crowns, to fit the rat-less head.
 "Yes, it's true, the 'rat' must go," said the girl at the hairdresser's to her favorite customer. "And it's all because women have at last come to their senses."
 "The rebellion began with some sensible woman upon whom it suddenly dawned one day that the lifeless, jack-luster, falling condition of her hair must be blamed upon her 'rat'."

ISN'T THIS A CHIC LITTLE TURBAN—AND NOT SO VERY LITTLE AFTER ALL, IT'S JUST THE KIND TO WEAR WITH THE BACK TO NATURE HAIR DRESS. IT IS MADE OF FOLDS AND SWIRLS OF BLACK TAFFETA WITH NIFTY LITTLE LOOPS OF THE SAME AT THE SIDE-FRONT. AND IT'S NEW THIS FALL.

Then she stopped worrying and fretting about her hair long enough to take out the 'rat'.
 "Women will readily follow a courageous leader. And, of course, this woman was right. The 'rat' heats the scalp and compels an increased flow of oil. This oil gets into the 'rat' and becomes rancid. The dead oil rubs back on the hair, and a daily shampoo wouldn't undo the damage it causes.
 "Between you and me, she remembered just in time that her hair is her crowning glory—a thing that many women will recall too late.
 "Of course, we are in business to make money, and the more rats, puffs, switches and braids we sell the better we're off, so we say little about this revolution. Puffs and light switches will still be worn, and the hair will be soft and fluffy about the face. But rats—well, confidentially, we're not buying any new rats."
 As a result of this timely (?) discovery of a rational woman, milliners are working overtime, making hats with smaller crown-sizes to fit these rat-less heads. This fall and winter there will be a radical change in hats on account of the change in coiffures.

GINGHAM HOUSE GOWN

A good substantial little frock is this one, made of checked and plain gingham, with heavy lace cuffs and vest.
 ling of their saxes ascended to the resolute ears of Mary Elizabeth.
 All of Wednesday the Greeks undermined the foundations of the Ruddy citadel. The plaster ascended to the windows of the third floor in warning clouds. The rending of beams and ripping of laths counted off the minutes that led to impending disaster. By Wednesday night the lower floor of the house was a skeleton.

Prevented Water Famine.
 Then again yesterday morning came on the implacable Greeks. Mary Elizabeth and Frankie still held the sanctum of the home on the third floor. Father Ruddy and Phil, the elder brother, went off to their labors. The weakened stairs leading down from their home croaked under their tread, but still they went away, knowing that where Mary Elizabeth was there also was security.
 One of the attackers went into the dismantled lower chamber and cut the water pipes. The plaster above was prepared for that; she had two tubs full of water and every bucket and dish in the kitchen was brimming against a famine.
