

¶ I intend to be better and wiser to-morrow.—
 ¶ Of the future, ere day I may require to borrow,
 ¶ As the future will furnish the fund to repay,
 ¶ The twenty-four hours—besides, what's a day?
 ¶ 'Tis a life—if you look at the course of the last,
 You will see there, the image of all that is past,
 You will see, Mr. Scroggins, the difference too Between what you have done and intended to do,
 If your duty to-day you perceive and neglect,
 How great a reform may to-morrow expect;
 Look back on the past, and pronounce, Scroggins, whether A duty delayed is not shirked altogether, Where'er you intend to perform or to pay,
 I counsel you, Scroggins, to do it to-day,
 Nor drag out a life of dependence and sorrow.
 The slave of to-day and the slave of to-morrow, miserable by some equally short lived disappointment. But our energy and our dependence are both in vain. The stream bears us on, and our joys and our griefs alike are left behind us; we may be shipwrecked, but we cannot anchor; our voyage may be hastened, but it cannot be delayed; whether rough or smooth, the river hastens towards its home, till the roaring of the ocean is in our ears, and the tossing of the waves is beneath our feet, and the land lessens from our eyes, and the floods are lifted up around us, and the earth loses sight of us, and we take our last leave of earth and its inhabitants; and of our farther voyage there is no witness but the infinite and Eternal.
