

Odinga and Worsfold Athletes of the Month

Top jocks of November

by Eva Pendzich

The University of Alberta's male and female Sport Chek athletes of the month for November are Golden Bear soccer forward Norm Odinga and Panda soccer defender Heidi Worsfold.

As well as being named U of A's male athlete of the month, Odinga was a unanimous selection to the 1984 Canada West Union Athletic Association all-star team. The 5'10", 155 lb. forward is also a member of the 1984 Canadian Olympic Soccer team.

Odinga was the second leading scorer on the Bears' soccer team with five goals. Four of his five goals were scored against the Saskatchewan Huskies on Oct. 20, leading the Bears to a 6-3 victory. Odinga's five goals placed him third in overall conference scoring. He was also directly responsible for creating opportunities that led to 12 more Bear goals.

Worsfold, U of A's female athlete of the month was the Panda's leading scorer this season with six goals. An amazing accomplishment considering the fact that she was a central defender. All six of her goals came from set plays — five corners and one free kick.

The 5'8" defender scored three of her six goals (including two winners) in the Canada West Championships, held in Vancouver on Oct. 26-28. Worsfold's three goals aided the Pandas to a second place finish in the finals.

Worsfold, a 1983 Provincial Senior Select and the 1983 Edmonton City league Most-Valuable Player, had an outstanding year despite missing the last two games due to a serious ankle injury.

Both Odinga and Worsfold are Arts students, in their second and third year respectively. As athletes of the month they will receive a commemorative plaque, and $50 will be donated in their name to a charity of their choice.

Heidi Worsfold and Norm Odinga are presented with their awards from Sport Chek as the U of A's female and male athletes of the month
