

3. Relations between organized labour and the government.

1. Growth of consultation in wartime, culminating in full discussion in advance of the Labour Relations Code.
2. Increased representation of organized labour on governmental agencies, including the Boards of Directors of Crown Companies.
3. Invaluable assistance of organized labour in the operation of National Selective Service.

4. Wartime gains of labour.

1. Vast extension of collective bargaining.
2. Full employment.
3. Security afforded by Unemployment Insurance.

5. The two great fears and evils of industrial society:

1. WAR
2. MASS UNEMPLOYMENT