

ON the First of January, 1868, was published the first Number of Volume 2 of

“The Anglo-American Magazine,”

Containing 112 pages, royal octavo, with double columns, and numerous illustrations. Price, 15s. per annum, paid in advance; sent by mail to any part of British North America, or the United States.

In each issue, are original papers on subjects connected with BRITISH AMERICA; party politics, or religious articles of a denominational character, are carefully excluded. Selections of the best writings in the leading British periodicals, especially such as have reference to the welfare and interests of these Colonies, will always be found in its pages, with a careful digest of CURRENT EVENTS OF THE WORLD, SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERIES, COMMERCIAL NEWS, MUSICAL INTELLIGENCE, and all matters of general interest, derived from recent information.

As it is purposed to make this publication a national and not a local work, it will unflinchingly advocate all questions affecting THE COMMON INTERESTS OF OUR COLONIES AS AN INTEGRAL PORTION OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE, WITH THE JANUARY NUMBER COMMENCED A GENERAL HISTORY

OF THE AMERICAN WAR OF 1812 '13 AND '14,

To be continued in succeeding numbers of the MAGAZINE till completed. The Publisher has been induced to take this step by the solicitation and advice of a very numerous body of Gentlemen willing to contribute information, as well as from his own conviction that such a work is much required; nothing satisfactory of a similar nature having been yet given to the world. Neither pains nor expense have been spared to carry out this object; and he confidently promises an impartial history of the period in question.—Any parties in the possession of information that would serve to enhance the value of such a history are respectfully solicited to contribute their quota towards what may fairly be called a National Undertaking,—making sure, however, that any statements forwarded, are divested of party feeling; as any complaints of misrepresentation can only be met by promptly making public the authority from whence the information was derived.
